MEDIA INFORMATION

CREDENTIALS: Working press credentials for Carolina home games can be obtained by contacting Rick Brewer in the Sports Information Office. Brewer's mailing address is P.O. Box 2126, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27514.

Requests are screened to insure a working press box. Children, spouses and pets are not allowed in compliance with the working code of the U.S. Basketball Writers Association.

FILING COPY: The Department of Athletics furnishes a number of telephones for writers to use in moving their copy from the press box. Anyone desiring a private phone should contact Southern Bell in Chapel Hill. The Sports Information Office has one telecopier which is available on a first-come, first-serve basis after each game.

PRESS BOX SERVICES: Programs and statistics will be provided before each game. A play-by-play will be distributed at the end of each half. Complete halftime and final boxscores will be provided. Coaches' quotes will also be available.

Sandwiches and soft drinks are available in the press box.

INTERVIEWS: Player interviews should be arranged by contacting the Sports Information Office. Generally, these interviews will be set up before or after practice in Carmichael Auditorium.

RADIO NETWORK AND TV SHOW: The Tar Heels Sports Network is one of the largest and best basketball radio networks in the nation. The network is operated by Village Companies of Chapel Hill with Jim Heavner as the producer. Woody Durham will handle the play-by-play with Henry Hinton adding color commentary.

The UNC Coaches Show will be televised across the state of North Carolina each Sunday. John Kilgo serves as emcee for this program which features Coach Dean Smith and game highlights.

The Outlook

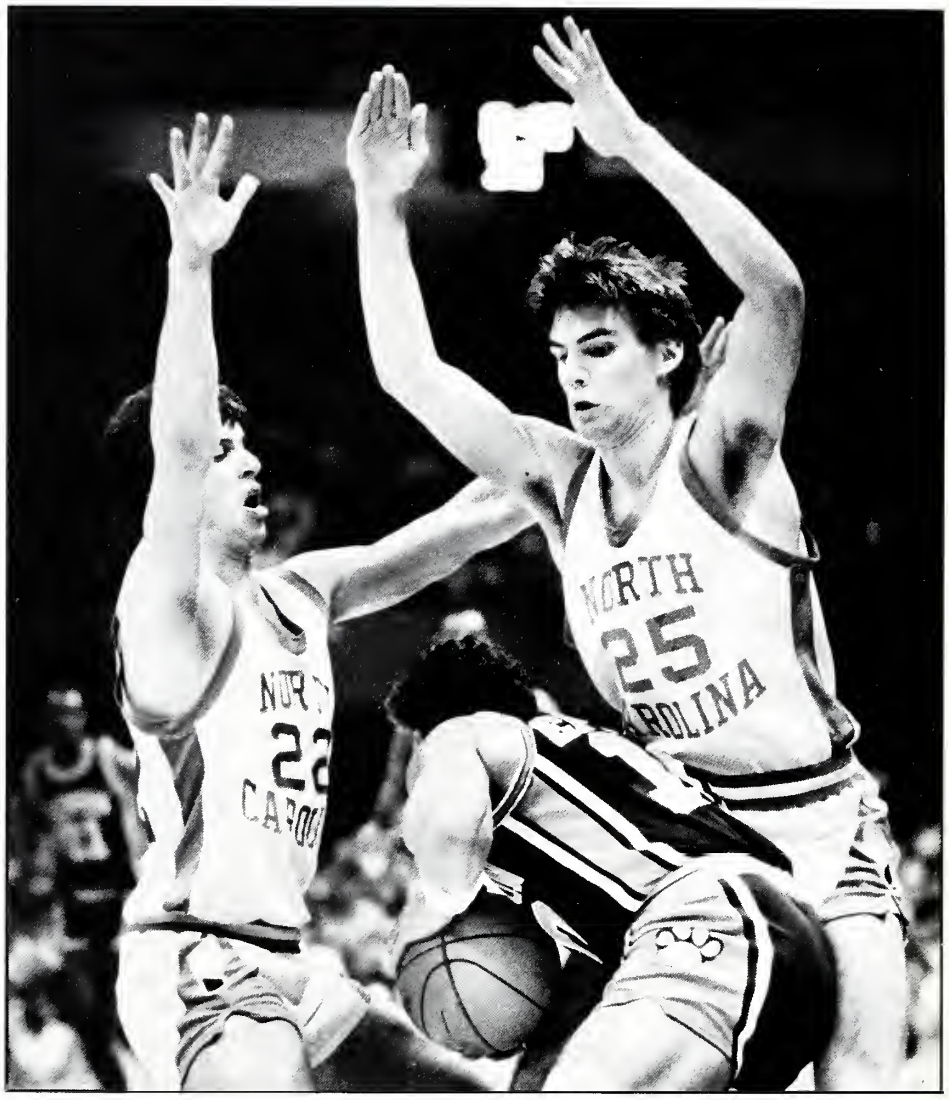
After suffering the greatest personnel losses in college basketball, the North Carolina Tar Heels must do a lot of work if they are to again be one of the nation's best teams in the 1984-85 season.

Carolina posted a 28-3 record last year, including an incredible 14-0 mark in the rugged Atlantic Coast Conference. The Tar Heels were the number one team in the country every week of the season and finished the year atop both the Associated Press and United Press International polls.

However, four important members of that team are gone. The missing include forward Matt Doherty, consensus All-America forward Sam Perkins, National Player of the Year Michael Jordan and reserve forward Cecil Exum. All played key roles in Carolina's success and all were selected in the NBA draft.

"We've lost two of the best players in the game in Sam and Michael," says Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith, "along with Matt Doherty who was vastly under-rated. I think people will appreciate the things he did more now that he's gone. Cecil gave us quiet leadership and was one of our most respected players.

"That leaves us with an extremely inexperienced team. This will be a regrouping year for us. We do have two regulars back from last year in Brad



Buzz Peterson (22) and Steve Hale (25) trap an opponent.

WHAT DEAN SMITH SAYS ABOUT . . .

The 1984-85 Season

"I think we will have a good basketball team. However, we have lost four important players from last year and that leaves us with an inexperienced team. Inexperience always causes concerns about inconsistency.

"The schedule is difficult as always. With an inexperienced team, it isn't likely we will be able to have many off nights and still win.

"I honestly rate this team as a question mark right now. Certainly, it is difficult to compare it with our recent teams which have put together perhaps one of the best three and four-year periods in college basketball's modern history."

Areas of Concern

"We're probably not as quick as we have been in the last three years. That loss of some quickness will hurt us defensively and so will our lack of experience. Our defense is the kind which really requires experienced players to be as effective as we want. We don't take a short cut defensively and just throw out a 2-1-2 zone. We want to be a sound man-to-man defensive team with surprises from that. It simply takes time and work to learn our defensive system.

"Quite obviously, a major concern is the loss of Sam Perkins, Michael Jordan and Matt Doherty. We will certainly miss Sam's great overall play. Of course, other teams won't have that type of play either. But, we've been able to depend on him for tremendous games day-in and day-out for his defense, scoring, rebounding and shot blocking. We've grown accustomed to having him do those things so it will be hard to play without him.

"Michael spoiled us by scoring so many easy-baskets after making steals or taking lob passes for dunks on plays we had set up specifically for him. He improved tremendously each year he was here to go along with his physical maturity. And, in my opinion, Michael will continue to get better in the next several years. We're also faced with having to teach a younger player to do the relatively unnoticed things that Matt did so well for us."

Daugherty and Kenny Smith, plus Steve Hale who started in the latter part of the season after Kenny suffered an injury.

"But, we've lost three of our top four scorers and rebounders. Right now this team is a question mark. We could be very good or we could have problems. At this point, I really don't know what to expect."

One thing Smith does know is that he won't have the luxury of playing Perkins, Jordan and Doherty. The 6-10 Perkins finished his career as the second-leading scorer and the leading rebounder in Tar Heel history. He scored 17.6 points a game last year and averaged 9.6 rebounds. A three-time first-team All-America, he played in 115 Carolina victories, the most by any college player since the early 1950's.

Last season Jordan was a unanimous first-team All-America for the second straight year, averaging 19.6 points and 5.3 rebounds. The 6-5 guard won all the player-of-the-year awards. After discussions with Smith, it was decided he should make himself available for the NBA draft after his junior season.

Doherty led the Tar Heels in assists and also averaged 9.8 points and 4.0 rebounds. In fact, he and Walter Davis are the only players in school history with 1,000 points, 400 rebounds and 400 assists.

Sparked by those three players in particular, Carolina dominated ACC play last season in a year in which the league was supposed to be its strongest ever. In conference games only, the Tar Heels led the ACC in both scoring offense and scoring defense, averaging 81.9 points and giving up just 67.0. Those are good indications of why Carolina was rated the number one team in the country throughout the year.

Joe Wolf grabs a loose ball against N.C. State.

"The importance of Sam and Michael to our team offensively is obvious," says Smith. "But, I'm more concerned with what those two and Matt did defensively. It will be tough to match last year's defense. Much work will have to be done to build our defensive foundation.

"I'm not quite as concerned offensively because our teams always seem to have good shot selection. We won't be as spectacular without Jordan and Perkins, but we should be able to attack any defense."

Certainly, the three returning players who saw the most action last year should be able to help in that respect. All are highly capable performers.

Daugherty, a 6-11, 240-pound junior from Black Mountain, N.C., was Carolina's third-leading scorer (10.5) and second-leading rebounder (5.6) last season. If he can make as much improvement between his sophomore and junior years as he did between his freshman and sophomore seasons, he should be one of the ACC's better frontcourt players.

Kenny Smith, a 6-3, 165-pound sophomore from Queens, N.Y., had a fine freshman year, averaging 9.1 points a game, handing out 114 assists and making steady improvement on defense. However, a broken left wrist at mid-season caused him to miss eight games.

WHAT DEAN SMITH SAYS ABOUT . . .

Strengths

"We have excellent prospects in our program. Because of the success we've had here many young men want to come to Carolina. Those who will be playing a great deal were very fine high school players. Now we need for them to develop into good, all-around college players.

"And when you talk about high school players, people usually think of scoring. I'm not worried about our ability to score. Our offense has always lent itself to a good percentage shot with the board covered. I think we will again have a high field goal percentage as we always have."

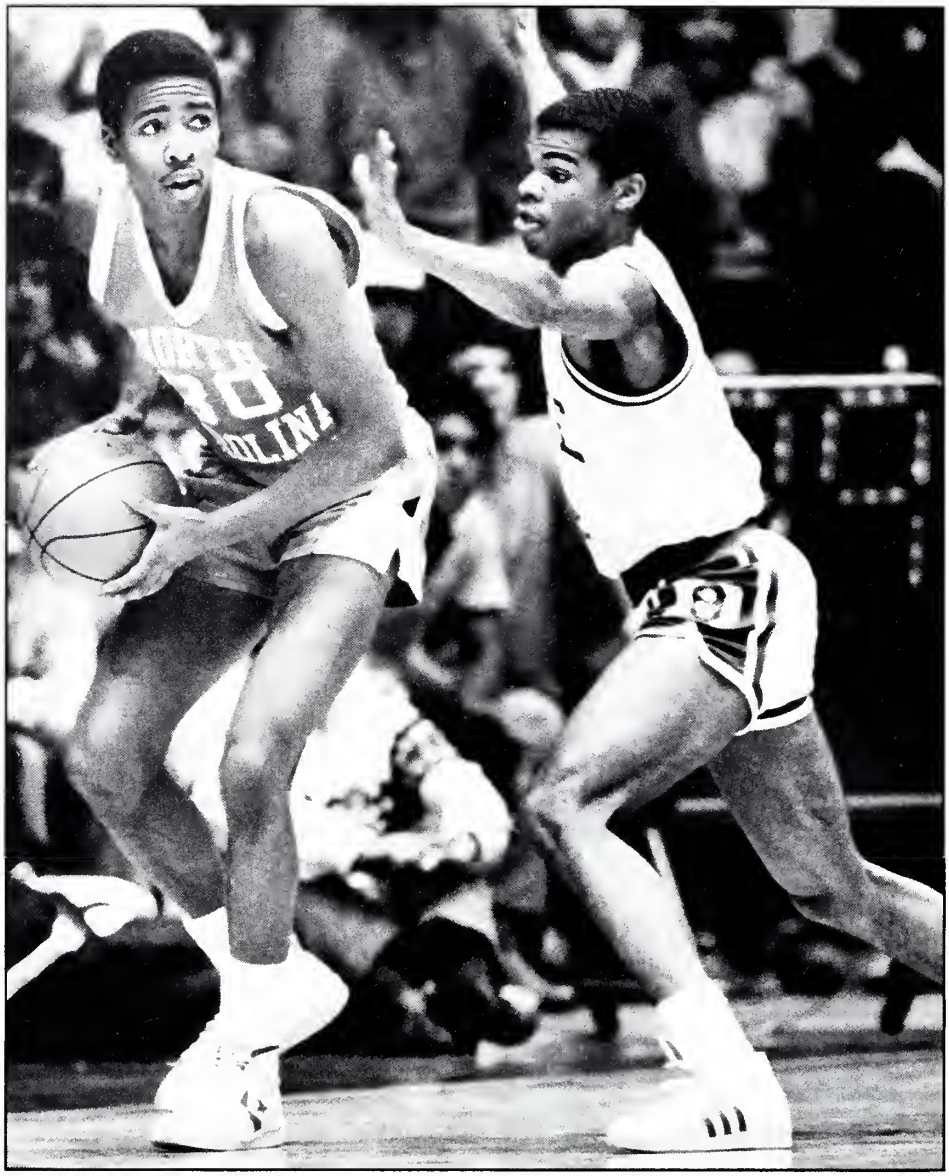
Brad Daugherty

"Brad is relatively young for his class. We think his improvement will continue as it did from his freshman to sophomore year. If this does happen, he can be an outstanding big man for us. He had some sensational games last year, but there were also some times when he didn't do as well. We need a consistent performance from him this season. Brad is still maturing physically as one who turned 19 on October 19 should be. We hope he will stay injury-free as he is very important to the success of our team."

Kenny Smith

"Kenny got off to an outstanding start as a freshman last year and yet, as he pointed out, it was easy playing with the experienced players we had. It will be interesting to see how he responds to having carry more of the load this year.

"Kenny is fully recovered from his injury. He has very good speed and quickness and is a very intelligent player. He has been lifting weights to try to get stronger, which I think is important for him. Most importantly, he has more of an idea of what we want defensively and I think he will be a better defensive player than he was a year ago."



Kenny Smith looks for a teammate.

The Atlantic Coast Conference Race

"Last year the conference had tremendous balance. Just because we were 14-0 and the second-place team was 9-5 doesn't mean the league wasn't balanced. There were a lot of very close games which could have gone either way. Virginia and Georgia Tech, which tied for fifth and sixth, were very good teams with Virginia even reaching the NCAA's Final Four.

"I think we will have that same type of balance this year. I don't know if we will have a team in the top five nationally, but I think any of our eight teams could be in the top 20 by the end of the season. It's hard to pick a favorite, but we do have three very good basketball teams — Duke, Georgia Tech and N.C. State — returning their entire starting lineups from last season. Plus, each has had what is considered an excellent recruiting year. I can't ever remember another situation like that in the ACC."

Hale came on after that injury and developed into a solid ACC player. Always a fine defender, he made major contributions offensively when they were needed. Hale is a 6-3, 180-pound junior from Jenks, Okla.

Three other lettermen who got substantial playing time last year are Buzz Peterson, a 6-5, 180-pound senior from Asheville, N.C.; Dave Popson, a 6-10, 210-pound sophomore from Ashley, Pa.; and Joe Wolf, a 6-10, 235-pound sophomore from Kohler, Wis. The only other lettermen are 6-11½ Timo Makkonen, a graduate student whose major contributions have come in practice sessions, and Cliff Morris, a 6-3 walk-on who played in just 13 games.

Peterson got off to a great start as a sophomore until a knee injury sidelined him at mid-season. Although he played a great deal last year, he did not seem to have the same confidence and enthusiasm he had before his injury. The Tar Heels are hopeful he can return to that earlier form.

Wolf was the number one frontcourt reserve last year and continued improvement is expected of him. Coaches say Popson needs to be stronger and better defensively.

Two other prominent players should be Curtis Hunter, a 6-4½, 188-pound sophomore from Durham, N.C., and Warren Martin, a 6-11½, 240-pound junior from Axton, Va. Both were important reserves during the 1982-83 season, but were red-shirted last year because of injuries.

"Curtis should benefit from last year because he worked very hard on his outside shot," says Smith. "He's a fine passer and we believe he's going to improve defensively. The year off gave Warren a chance to work on his running and jumping skills. He appears more confident than in the past."

Incoming freshmen are 6-1 Ranzino Smith of Chapel Hill, N.C. and 6-4 Matthew Brust of Babylon, N.Y. The Carolina coaching staff is hopeful they will be able to help, but is not counting on them for major contributions.

Projecting a possible lineup is difficult because of a problem at small forward. There is really no one on the roster perfectly suited for that spot.

"We had hoped to recruit to that position," says Smith, "although

Michael would have been our starter there if he had remained in school. We have four potentially good guards in Kenny, Buzz, Steve and Curtis. Then we jump to four capable big men — Daugherty, Wolf, Popson and Martin.

"We may play some games with three big men in the lineup together. In others, we may go with three guards. A lot will depend on the opposition."

As usual, the opposition will be tough. Carolina's schedule has been rated one of the most difficult in the country for several seasons and this year's will again be challenging. The biggest games, of course, will be those in the ACC.

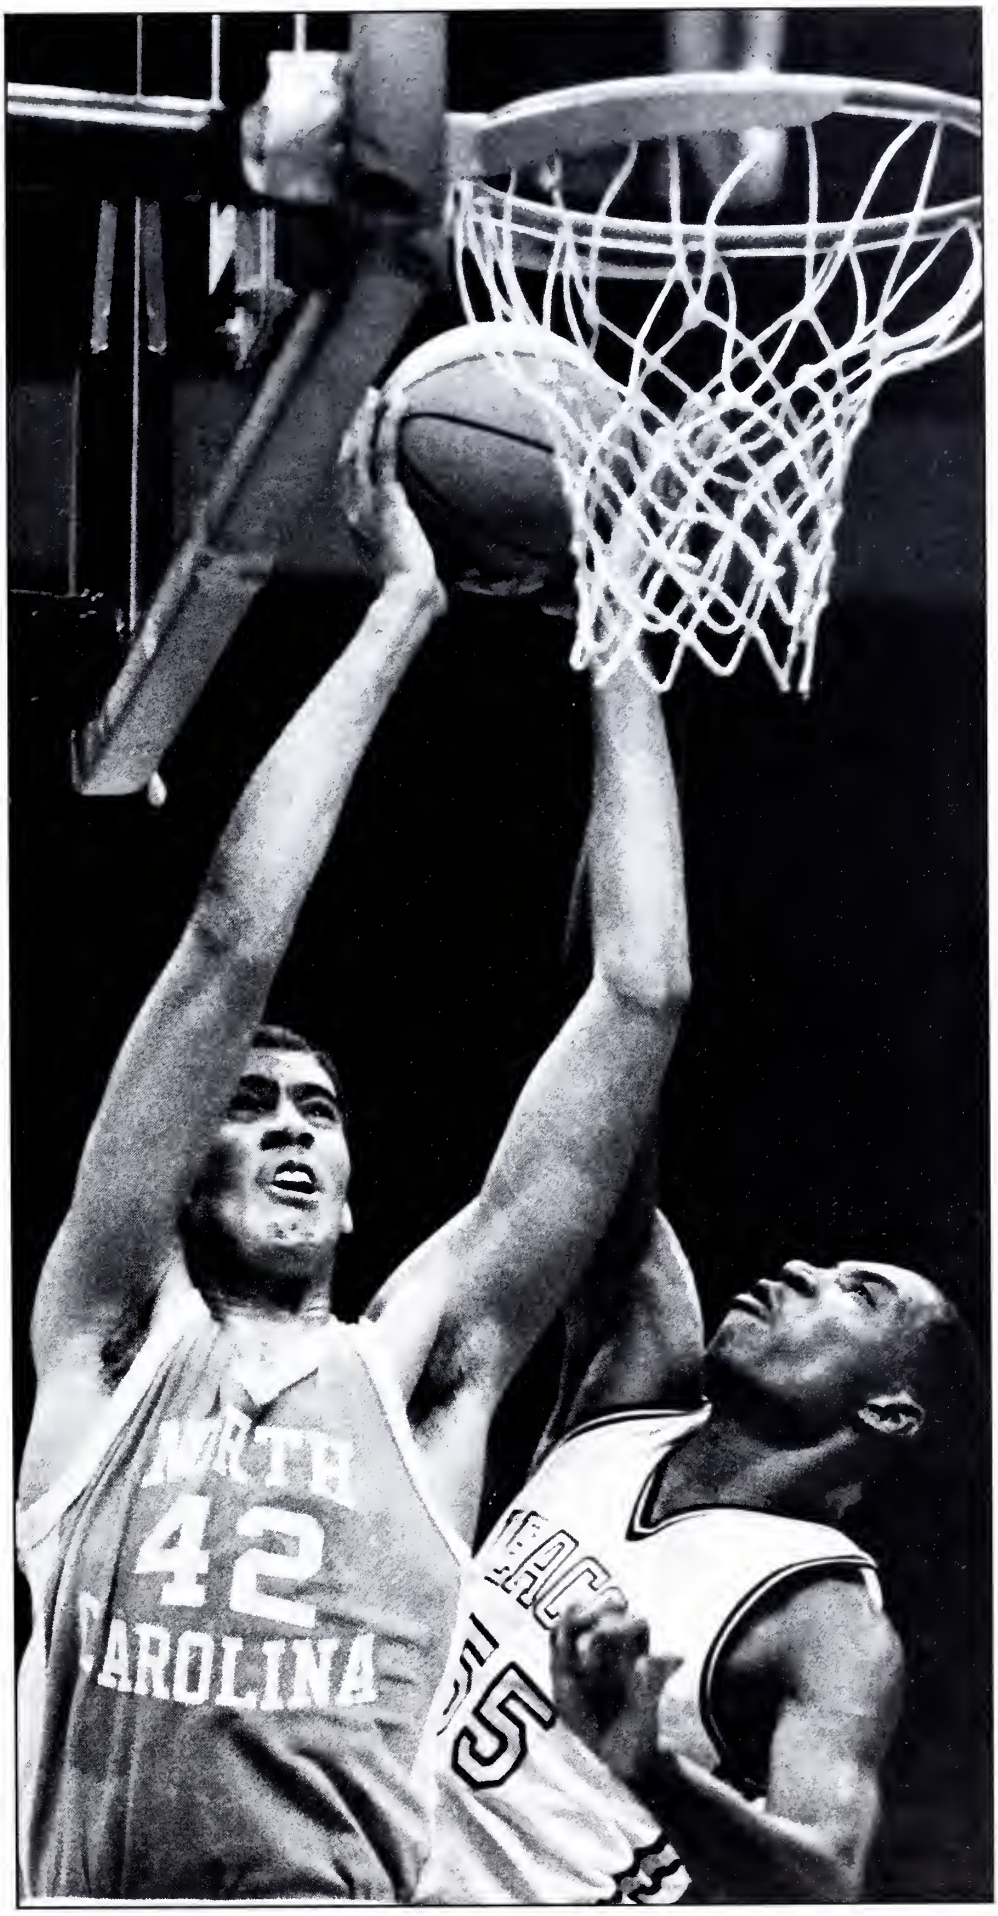
"The league should have tremendous balance," says Smith, "although we may not have a team in the top five nationally. Actually, I thought we had good balance last year even though we were 14-0. A lot of those wins were very close ones. A good indication of that balance was Virginia, which tied for fifth and sixth in the ACC, reaching the Final Four.

"Any team could finish first or last in our conference. Certainly, we've had the biggest personnel losses while some other teams — Duke, N.C. State, Georgia Tech — really have everybody back. It will be an interesting season."

Where does Carolina fit in the ACC race?

"I really don't know," says Smith "We have some potentially fine college players who excelled in high school. But, that doesn't necessarily mean success on the college level. We don't expect our returning players to be as good as Perkins, Doherty and Jordan. But, we hope they will continue improving individually to give us strength as a team. Basketball remains a team game.

"We should get better as the season progresses. However, a lot of things must fall into place for us to have an outstanding year."



Brad Daugherty powers to a basket.

A Message From The Chancellor

Carolina basketball! The words almost explode. The last minute victories; those compromises with defeat; the electricity of anticipation. Carolina basketball has created a binding force for the people of our Old North State — not just students and alumni — but for people everywhere from Manteo to Murphy as Our Team strives for another victory, another championship.

What has become in these Dean Smith years the tradition of Carolina basketball is something that reflects properly much of what we want The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to be.

Carolina basketball is played hard, played well and played honestly. Young men who have represented Carolina on the team have gone on to the professional league, but others have become physicians, lawyers, ministers, businessmen, have entered many walks of life. They have represented their University well ... as alumni, holders of degrees. They not only have played here, they received their educations here. That is the tradition of Carolina basketball — the student/athlete.

Intercollegiate athletics has an important place in today's universities. Of course, it provides a rallying point for alumni, students, faculty, staff and friends to help focus their affection for this institution. In addition, it continues to provide a means for young men and women to receive a college education. We hear too often about the abuses of athletics, about athletes not required to attend classes, about athletes who leave school at the end of their final season without degrees. We hear about the so-called hypocrisy of intercollegiate athletics. We hear little about the positive side of college sports.

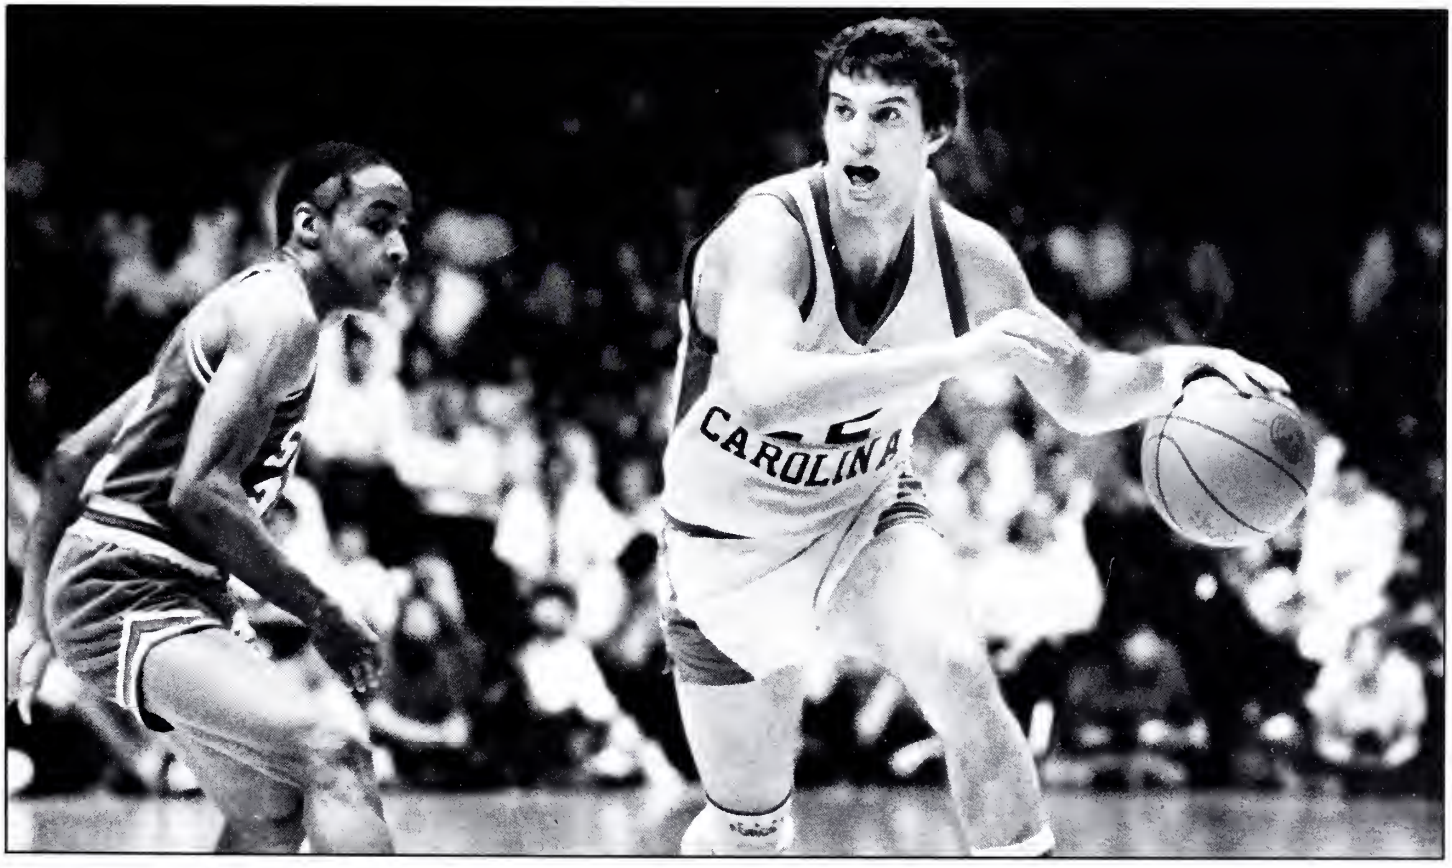
The Carolina basketball program is recognized as a winning program, but it is much more. Since Coach Smith's arrival in 1962, some 121 of his players have received degrees. Other universities can cite similar experiences but how little we hear about the positive influence of intercollegiate athletics in higher education. How little we hear of the men and women in the minor sports who have played their way into a scholarship-aided education and have gone on to productive, useful lives largely because they did have some ability in sports.

At Carolina, we have kept sports in a constructive perspective. Academics come first. Academics must come first at a university. Our coaches are teachers who help mold young people in the rigors of competition and discipline, two factors in life where lessons learned on the playing fields are lessons that will be drawn upon for many years. I believe we have been successful in this down through the years.

Tradition and history are very important in Chapel Hill. We do not dwell on what was, our concerns are mainly on what will be. This University has a long reputation of excellence in teaching, research and public service. Excellence also is a tradition when Carolina teams enter the fields and arenas of competition with other universities. Our athletes carry with them that requirement of excellence. At Chapel Hill our dedication continues to be the education and nurturing of the whole person and sport is a vital part of life and society. We expect no less of our student/athletes than that they take from us what we can give ... an education befitting the Carolina tradition of service to our state, our nation, our society.

These young men and women of our varsity teams play today, so that they may help all of us tomorrow.

Christopher C. Fordham III
Chancellor



Chancellor Christopher Fordham

As its chancellor since 1980, Dr. Christopher C. Fordham III has led the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to ever stronger standing as one of the nation's great academic, research and service institutions.

In report after report, the University has placed among the top two dozen colleges and universities in the nation and near the top — usually number one — among those in the South or Southeast. The University has been measured by its reputation among peers, the productivity of its faculty and graduates, and its success in attracting federal and other outside funds for research and programs, and by each criterion, it has been found excellent.

Building upon those honors, Fordham has directed the University into new areas critical to the nation's future.

Particularly visible among these initiatives have been efforts to extend the University's cooperative efforts with North Carolina's public schools, and steps to incorporate technology into all aspects of the education process.

The high priority the University accords its work with public schools, Fordham has said, reflects the understanding that "the students being educated today in the public schools are the resources from which the University will produce the leaders of the future.

"This continuum of education must be strong throughout to prepare the youth of today for the society of tomorrow."

In keeping with that philosophy, Fordham has guided the University to a leadership role in working to improve public education. The Lyndhurst Fellowship Program, which supports bright students who will be the best teachers of the future; the Center for Mathematics and Science Education, which will work to increase the supply of qualified secondary mathematics and science teachers; a College of Arts and Sciences program of workshops and internships for writing and foreign language teachers from the state's public schools; and other innovative activities are only part of this effort.

The emphasis on education quality overlaps considerably with the efforts Fordham has directed to gain acceptance for technology in all areas of academia.

Fulfilling this initiative, too, has resulted in a number of innovative new programs. The College of Arts and Sciences is conducting a computer-aided curriculum development program with support from IBM Corp., in which computers are being used in language tutorials, English composition and other areas. Students and faculty members in many other schools and departments now use computers routinely.

The University also has received funding for a new computer science building, which will assist its faculty members in that area in pursuing the most advanced research. Teaching in computer science has been enhanced by a teleclassroom facility, designed and operated by the Media and Instructional Support Center, which enables classes to be taught concurrently at Carolina and Duke University with full two-way communication.

In the technology area as well, Fordham's leadership role extends beyond the bounds of the University. He was a founding member of the board of directors of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, and he holds several other memberships and committee appointments in professional organizations.

The University's success in these areas of emphasis has not come at the expense of its other programs.

Great strides in the health professions were made while Fordham was dean of the School of Medicine (1971-79) and vice chancellor for health affairs (1977-80). Medical school programs were expanded, faculty strengthened and minority enrollment increased, and the school gained national prominence for its excellence and creativity. The Area Health Education Centers program was begun as a way to bring physicians closer to the population in this relatively rural state. A partnership among the state's four academic medical centers, community hospitals and health professionals throughout the state, AHEC has succeeded in achieving a more balanced distribution of doctors and other health professionals and is considered a model for decentralized health education.

New programs have been undertaken in all the health affairs schools — dentistry, medicine, nursing, pharmacy and public health — and new facilities have included the Lineberger Cancer Research Center, dedicated in May.

An equally impressive list of achievements has been recorded in the Division of Academic Affairs. The implementation of a new curriculum has incorporated basic skills in English, mathematics and foreign languages, as well as broad perspectives in science, in Western and non-Western culture, in aesthetics and in the humanities.

The School of Business Administration has undertaken new service programs and will, in concert with the William R. Kenan Jr. Charitable Trust, take part in a new center for the study of private enterprise, which will be located in the Kenan Center of North Carolina, a soon-to-be-built structure that will be but the latest constructed at Chapel Hill with non-state funding.

A Greensboro native, Fordham is the son of an alumnus and he met his wife Barbara while they were at Chapel Hill. Their children also have attended the University.

Fordham's premedical and early medical training came in Chapel Hill, where he received a certificate in medicine from the then two-year medical school in 1949. His M.C. came from Harvard University.

In the years that followed, he left Chapel Hill several times — once for military service, once to lead the University of Georgia's medical school, once briefly, to consider a top federal government post — but returned each time.

"When one's University calls, it's a very magnetic pull," he said.

While under the influence of that magnetism, he has repaid the University with work that has brought personal distinction as well. Fordham is a former member of the Association of American Medical Colleges' executive council and past chairman of the AAMC and the National Council of Deans and Southern Regional Deans.

A member of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Science, he also is a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine, a distinguished service member of the AAMC, a fellow of the American College of Physicians and a member of several other honorary societies.

He is an accomplished researcher and has written widely on health policy.

But above all, Fordham is the leader of the University at Chapel Hill, a job he continues to approach with missionary zeal.

"The University, I think, has a particular role," he has said, "because it's where the youngsters can reach for the stars. There are 13-year-olds all over the state of North Carolina who are striving to make better grades for one reason right now in this stage of their lives — so they can go to Carolina. And that's a wonderful thing.

"That's a wonderful star for the people of the state to put up there, and not many states have that."

Athletic Director John Swofford

One of the most respected administrators in intercollegiate sports is John Swofford, director of athletics at the University of North Carolina.

Swofford, now in his fifth year at this position, is in charge of one of the best-rounded athletic programs in the nation. Tar Heel football and basketball teams annually rank among the finest in America. In addition, Carolina fields outstanding teams in men's and women's non-revenue sports.

For example, in his short time as athletic director, Swofford has seen Tar Heel teams win six national collegiate championships — one in basketball, two in lacrosse and three in women's soccer. Carolina's football team has played in a post-season bowl game four of his five falls as athletic director. The Tar Heels have also won or tied for first place in the race for the Carmichael Cup, symbolic of overall athletic excellence in the Atlantic Coast Converence, for the past four years.

Some of the credit for Carolina's on-the-field excellence must go to Swofford for his behind-the-scenes work. While the day-to-day running of the Athletic Department is a time-consuming task, Swofford still has undertaken several major projects in his four years as athletic director.

With Swofford in the lead, Carolina has conducted a $30,000,000 fund-raising drive to construct a student activities center which will include a 22,000-seat basketball arena and an Olympic-size swimming pool. That facility is scheduled to open in 1985.

Since Swofford became athletic director, three new holes were constructed at Finley Golf Course; work has begun on a varsity tennis complex; Boshamer Stadium has been expanded and dressing rooms renovated for the Tar Heel baseball team; the University has hosted the NCAA Golf Championships, an NCAA regional baseball tournament, the AIAW National Soccer Tournament, the AIAW National Softball Tournament and the NCAA Women's Soccer Championships; the academic support staff has been expanded; and major changes have been made in future Tar Heel football schedules.

In April, Swofford was named by the NCAA Council as new chairman of the NCAA Football Television Committee. Swofford had been a committee member since 1982. That committee and the Division I Basketball Committee are generally regarded as the two most important in the NCAA organization. Swofford is chairing the committee as it tackles one of the biggest problems ever to face the NCAA — the dispute over football television rights.

These accomplishments are a good indication Swofford is well aware of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics and how to cope with them. But Chancellor Christopher Fordham knew that when he named him to replace Bill Cobey as athletic director on May 1, 1980. Cobey had resigned to pursue public office.

Swofford gives the credit for Carolina's recent successes to the people around him.

"We have an outstanding coaching, administrative and clerical staff, and with their help, our primary goal will be to continue the tradition of integrity and excellence that has been the trademark of Carolina athletics," he says. "Our athletic program is a part of a great university. It is a special place and we will strive to reflect her values and character.

"We will continue our commitment to a strong overall program and we will continually strive to operate on the principle that the student-athletes who are participants in our various sports are our greatest assets. We must be committed to their positive development as individuals while they are a part of our athletic program."

A native of North Wilkesboro, N.C., Swofford first came to Carolina as a Morehead Scholar in 1967. He graduated in 1971 with an A.B. in psychology and industrial relations.

He played quarterback and defensive back on Tar Heel football teams in 1969, 1970 and 1971. Those last two teams went to the Peach Bowl and Gator Bowl. He tied a then-school record against Vanderbilt in 1969 by throwing three touchdown passes in one game.

Swofford was named to the ACC Academic Honor Roll and Who's Who in College Athletics. He also served as president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes on campus.

In 1973 he earned a masters in athletic administration at Ohio University. In his time there Swofford served as a graduate assistant to the assistant business manager of athletics.

From 1973 to 1976 he was athletic ticket manager and assistant to the director of athletic facilities and finance at the University of Virginia. His duties in that job included directing all ticket sales, advertising and promotions. He also handled game contract settlements, stadium and coliseum operations and team travel arrangements.

He returned to Carolina in May, 1976 as assistant athletic director and business manager, handling all the athletic department's business affairs. Among his many other responsibilities were handling fund-raising affairs, team travel and the athletic dining hall. He also coordinated sports camps.

Although he remained assistant athletic director, Swofford dropped the business manager title and was named assistant executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation in January, 1979. In that job he was in charge of the overall financial structure of the athletic department. His position with the Educational Foundation involved general office procedures, membership services and fundraising.

Swofford is a member of the National Association of Collegiate Athletic Directors and is on the Board of Directors of the Ohio University Athletic Administration Program. He is a member of the Board of Directors of North Carolina National Bank in Chapel Hill and the Board of Directors of The Village Companies Foundation. He serves on the ACC television, football and basketball committees.

A regular jogger, Swofford enjoys reading and tennis. He is married to the former Becky Owens of North Wilkesboro. They have two children, Autumn and Chad.

BRAD DAUGHERTY

Height: 6-11
Weight: 240
Class: Junior
Hometown: Black Mountain, N.C.

One of two returning starters to the Tar Heel lineup ... Has the most playing time of any Carolina player although he was only 18 years old when practice began ... Started all of last year at center and most of his freshman season ... Third on the team in scoring last year with a 10.5 average ... Made 128 of 210 field goal attempts for a percentage of 61.0 and 59 of 87 free throws for a 67.8 mark ... Carolina's second-leading rebounder, averaging 5.6 a game ... Played in 30 of 31 games, missing only the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament opener against Clemson because of a hand injury ... That injury hampered him during post-season play, but it is healed now ... Scored in double figures 17 times, including a career-high 22 points against Iona in the opening round of the Holiday Festival Tournament at Madison Square Garden ... Hit eight of 12 field goal attempts in that game and also grabbed eight rebounds ... Named to the all-tournament team because of that performance ... Had a season-high 10 rebounds on three occasions — at Syracuse, at N.C. State and at Virginia ... One of his best offensive performances came in a home-court victory over Maryland ... Hit nine of 12 shots from the field and scored 20 points against the Terps that night ... Also improved steadily on defense throughout the season ... Came to Carolina as a 16-year-old freshman ... Played in 35 of 36 games in his first year here ... Saw reserve action early that season before moving into the starting lineup at center in the Tar Heels' 11th game ... Scored 287 points for an 8.2 average ... Had 181 rebounds, averaging 5.1 a game ... Made 110 of 197 field goal attempts for a percentage of 55.8 ... Season-scoring high was 18 in a win over Duke at Chapel Hill ... Grabbed a career-high 13 rebounds in the ACC Tournament that year against N.C. State ... Had 11 rebounds in a win against Ralph Sampson and Virginia in Charlottesville ... Named second-team Freshman All-America by Basketball Weekly ... Goes into his junior year with a career field goal percentage of 58.63 ... That's the fifth-best mark in school history behind Bobby Jones, Dennis Wuycik, Mitch Kupchak and Tommy LaGarde ... Has the tools to be a fine player ... Possesses unusually good speed for a big man ... With Sam Perkins gone, Daugherty will have to shoulder more of the rebounding responsibilities this year ... Without Perkins, Brad also figures to get more attention from opposing defenses ... Worked to improve over the summer by playing on the all-star team which represented the United States in the William Jones Cup Tournament in Taiwan ... That team was coached by Arizona's Lute Olsen and included Duke's Mark Alarie ... The U.S. Team won the tournament with a 9-0 record and Daugherty was the leading American rebounder ... Came to Carolina after a fine senior season at Charles D. Owen High School ... Coached there by Bill Burrows ... Didn't play as a freshman, but was the team's student manager ... Was on the junior varsity as a sophomore and on the varsity as a junior and senior ... Led his Owen team to the state tournament in his final season there ... Has an older brother, Steve, who played for Carolina assistant coach Roy Williams when he was the head coach at Owen.

A great competitor who is in contention for a starting position ... Did an excellent job of replacing Kenny Smith at point guard last year after Smith was injured at mid-season ... When Smith returned, Hale continued his fine play at the point and big guard positions ... Will see action at both backcourt spots again this year ... Has developed into a fine college player ... Possesses excellent basketball savvy ... Is an outstanding defender ... A left-hander who is a very good passer ... Played in all 31 games last season ... Handed out 113 assists ... Scored 162 points, averaging 5.2 a game ... Made 63 of 113 field goal attempts for a percentage of 55.8 ... Hit 36 of 43 free throws (83.7 percent) ... Scored a career-high 15 points against Arkansas and also had six assists and four steals in that game ... Made four of five field goal attempts, scored 12 points and had six assists at Clemson ... Gave a great performance against Duke in the final home game of the year ... Had a career-high 13 assists in that game ... That's just one short of Phil Ford's school record ... Also played very well defensively that day, making four steals and getting in position to draw some key charging fouls ... Also played well at Duke, hitting six of seven shots from the floor and scoring 13 points ... Handed out nine assists in homecourt wins over N.C. State and Maryland and against Furman in Charlotte ... Did a great job at point guard of handling Virginia's pressing defense in a win at Charlottesville ... Had seen action as a backup point guard as a freshman ... Played in all 36 games ... Averaged 2.6 points a game for a total of 93 ... Also had 70 assists ... Best performance of the year may have come in a win over Syracuse ... Played on an Athletes in Action team which toured Europe in the summer of 1983 ... Averaged 14.5 points on that tour, shooting 54.1 percent from the field and 80.0 percent from the foul line ... Led that team in assists with 80 ... His father, Jerry, is the former head coach at Oral Roberts ... First became interested in Carolina after seeing the Tar Heels defeat his father's team in the 1976 Far West Classic ... A campus leader in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes ... Fine student who hopes to go to medical school.

Capable of making a major contribution to the Tar Heel season ... Expected to battle for a starting position at either big guard or small forward ... Appears 100 percent after being hampered by injuries in his first two years at Carolina ... Missed 11 games in the middle of the 1982-83 season with a recurring foot injury from high school ... Suffered a break in that same foot late in the summer of 1983 during a pickup game ... Underwent surgery at that time and missed a lot of practice time ... Was able to work out in January ... But since he had missed so much practice, he was too far behind to play a key role for the Tar Heels ... Decided to sit out the entire season and thus has three years of eligibility left ... Appeared in 25 games as a freshman ... Scored 107 points for a 4.3 points-per-game average ... Made 40 of 76 field goal attempts for a percentage of 52.6 ... Led the Tar Heels in free throw shooting, hitting 25 of 30 for an accuracy mark of 83.3 ... Scored in double figures four times with a high of 13 against Pan American in the Oil City Classic ... A hard worker who has good speed ... Has improved his shooting touch in the last year ... Named North Carolina's High School Player of the Year by the Associated Press after his senior season at Southern Durham High ... Coached there by Larry Parrish ... Competed in the U.S. Olympic Committee's National Sports Festival in the summer of 1982 ... Played on the South's Gold Medal-winning team there and made the Festival all-star squad.

Missed the entire 1983-84 season with foot and leg injuries ... Although he was slowed in early practice sessions this year with another leg problem, he is being counted on for a major contribution this season ... Has worked hard in his three years at Carolina trying to develop into a top-flight performer ... If he can finally shake the injuries which have hampered him early in his career, he could be a fine frontcourt player ... Has great reach and good hands ... Also possesses a nice shooting touch ... Has worked in the weight room and on an off-season running program to increase his strength, stamina and speed ... Appeared in 19 games as a freshman, scoring 14 points and grabbing 16 rebounds ... Missed a lot of practice time that year because of a stress fracture in a foot ... Showed great improvement as a sophomore during the 1982-83 season ... Played in 35 games ... In the fight for playing time in the Tar Heel backcourt ... Has played mostly the big guard position in his first three years at Carolina, although he has seen some action as the team's quarterback ... Will probably concentrate on the big guard spot in his senior year ... Might even see some action at small forward in certain instances ... Scored 108 points in 29 games last year, averaging 3.7 points a game ... Made a sizzling 18 of 20 free throw attempts for a percentage of 90.0 ... Also handed out 58 assists ... Made the all-tournament team when Carolina played a series of games in Greece prior to last season ... Also was an all-tournament choice at the Stanford Invitational ... Had 15 points and three assists in the championship game there against Stanford ... Scored a career-high 19 points against Clemson in the Greensboro Coliseum, hitting nine of 12 shots from the field ... That performance came the first night after the Tar Heels lost Kenny Smith for eight games with a broken wrist ... Had also been an important reserve in his sophomore and freshman seasons ... Even started a few games early in his sophomore year ... Was sensational that year in an early-season game against LSU ... Made nine straight field goal attempts in the second half of that nationally-televised game to spark a Tar Heel come-from-behind victory ... Was five of six from the field, including two three-point field goals, and scored 14 points in a big road win at Virginia ... However, had that season cut short by a knee injury in Carolina's 24th game ... Suffered torn ligaments against Virginia in Chapel Hill and missed the rest of the season ... Finished with a 7.2 scoring average that year, shooting 51.5 percent from the field and 70.4 percent from the foul line ... Played in 30 of 34 games as a freshman ... Missed some early-season practice sessions with a foot injury that year, but came back to become a key reserve on the Tar Heels' national championship team ... Came up with a big steal in the NCAA Finals against Georgetown ... A good shooter ... Fine ballhandler and passer ... Continues to make strides defensively ... Seems to have a knack for being in the right place at the right time ... Coached at Asheville High School by Rodney Johnson, now an assistant at Boston University ... Named North Carolina's High School Player of the Year as a senior by the Associated Press ... Played in the U.S. Olympic Committee's National Sports Festival following his senior year of high school and his freshman season at Carolina.

The Student Activities Center

Beginning next season the University of North Carolina will play its basketball games in the most modern arena in the country.

The 21,800-seat Student Activities Center is scheduled to open on campus next spring. The first intercollegiate game there will be played against UCLA in November, 1985.

The opening of the Student Activities Center will mean more Carolina fans will get an opportunity to see the Tar Heels in action than ever in the past. The Center will seat more than twice as many people as Carmichael Auditorium. That means more seats for students, alumni, faculty and staff.

Housed in the Center will be the basketball arena, an Olympic-size 50-meter pool, dressing facilities for multi-school events and office space for athletic department staff.

Cost of the Center will be $34 million. All of that money is coming entirely from private sources. No state or federal money has been used in the construction.

Although raising that amount of money certainly ranks as one of the most ambitious and challenging efforts in the history of intercollegiate athletics, Carolina accomplished it in less than three years.

The amazing thing about that figure is that it has been reached without a gift of over $1,000,000. Professional fund-raisers say it is quite unusual for so much money to be raised privately without one huge gift. That has not been the case at Carolina. Instead, over 2,200 different people have contributed to the building.

Actual construction began in August of 1982 on a site located just off Manning Drive behind Hinton James Dormitory. Set in a natural ravine, the Center's exterior earth-tone color will blend into the surroundings of the nearby woods and will be in keeping with the natural beauty of the campus.

The double-decked main area will accomodate 7,000 more fans than any other Atlantic Coast Conference facility. In addition, the Center will provide much needed space for physical education, recreation and intramurals.

Portions of the lower arena's stands will be constructed on a telescoping platform which, when retracted, will provide enough floor space for three full-length basketball courts set side-by-side. This versatile feature will greatly enhance the University's ability to attract major cultural, political and other non-athletic events to the campus.

Concerts, lectures, theatrical performance and graduation exercises are now limited to either the 1,740-seat Memorial Hall or the 10,000-seat Carmichael Auditorium. Neither of these facilities provides adequate acoustical control, floor space, lighting or perhaps most important of all, parking.

The Students Activities Center will be located next to an existing 600-space lighted parking lot. In all, there will be more than 4,000 parking spaces within walking distance of the building.

The Educational Foundation, Inc. is the organization which has directed the fund-raising efforts. For years, members of the Foundation have provided the support necessary to entirely fund the financial aid program of the Carolina Athletic Department. That scholarship program costs in excess of $1,000,000 annually.

Season ticket priority in the Student Activities Center will be granted to contributors who have made the building possible.

Certainly, there are few universities in the entire country which would have dared to undertake a project of such enormously challenging proportions. To have raised $34 million in such a short time is an indication of the loyalty alumni have for this university and the great respect in which the Tar Heel basketball program is held.

Dean Smith

Dean Smith, who has guided the University of North Carolina to its greatest heights in basketball, is heading into his 24th season as the Tar Heels' head coach.

Although Carolina has a rich basketball history, steeped in tradition, the school has enjoyed its greatest success during Smith's remarkable tenure.

In 23 seasons, Smith's teams have won 524 games and lost only 156. That's a winning percentage of .771, giving Smith the fourth-best mark in history of anyone who has coached at least 20 seasons on the major college level.

The men ahead of him?

Three guys named Clair Bee, Adolph Rupp and John Wooden.

Teams coached by Smith have won an NCAA championship, a National Invitation Tournament title and an Olympic Gold Medal. The only other coaches in history to accomplish that have been Pete Newell and Bobby Knight.

Smith's NCAA crown came in 1982 and his 1971 team won the NIT. He guided the United States to a sweep of the 1976 Summer Olympic Games in Montreal.

Smith, who played for the legendary Phog Allen at Kansas, is also one of only two men to play on an NCAA championship team and then coach one. Knight is the other.

In the last 18 years Smith's Tar Heel teams have been among the most dominant in the game. His teams have a record of 458-109 during that stretch, a winning percentage of .808. That's an average record of 25-6 each season. That record has been compiled against an always difficult schedule which has included only nine games in Carmichael Auditorium each year.

Carolina has reached the Final Four of the NCAA Tournament seven times in this same period. Only UCLA has been there more often in that time.

In fact, UCLA's Wooden is the only coach ever to make more Final Four appearances than Smith. In NCAA regional championships, Wooden is the leader with 12 followed by Smith with seven. The winningest coaches in NCAA Tournament play are Wooden (47 victories), Rupp (30) and Smith (28).

Carolina has been in the NCAA Tournament field each of the past 10 seasons. That's the longest streak going in the nation. The highlight of this era came in 1982 when the Tar Heels defeated Georgetown, 63-62, in one of the most exciting and best-played NCAA championship games of all time.

The Tar Heels have now won at least 20 games for 14 consecutive years. That gives Smith the longest streak of consecutive 20-win seasons in history. He also has had 12 seasons in which his teams have won at least 25 games, more than any other major college coach in history. Wooden had 11 seasons of at least 25 victories.

Last year Carolina posted a 28-3 record despite playing 22 of its games against teams selected for the NCAA Tournament or the NIT. The Tar Heels were ranked as the number one team in the country each week of the season, finishing as the Associated Press and United Press International's regular-season national champions.

Success like that was one of the reasons Smith was inducted into the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame in 1983. He was taken into the state of North Carolina's Sports Hall of Fame two years prior to that.

Actually, Smith's place among the great men of the game has been obvious for some time. Marquette Coach Rick Majerus touched on that a year ago upon hearing that Joe Wolf, whom he had been recruiting, had decided to attend Carolina.

"Joe made a good choice," said Majerus. "North Carolina may very well be the best program in the country and Dean Smith may very well be the best coach of all time."

Such tributes from his peers are nothing new for Smith. For years rival coaches have talked about the consistency of his teams, the integrity of his program and the fact his players are also students.

"When you play against North Carolina and Dean Smith, that's the best," said James Madison Coach Lou Campanelli, after facing the Tar Heels in the 1983 NCAA Tournament. "That's the epitome of college basketball.

"They represent everything you want — dedication, class, attitude. As we built our program at James Madison, we've paid a lot of attention to that. If that reflects in our style of play, that we resemble North Carolina, then I consider that a compliment."

A couple of seasons ago Virginia Coach Terry Holland touched more specifically on the consistency of Smith's teams in talking about the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Because of the league we're in, it's difficult to stay at the top every year," he said. "Only one team, North Carolina, has been able to do that. The rest of us have a couple of good years, then we have to fight for a couple of years and put it back together."

Smith's teams have certainly stayed at the top. In the last 18 years Carolina has finished first in the ACC regular-season race 12 times and has been second on the other six occasions. No other school in any conference has ever finished first or second in its league standings for such a long period. Two of those second-place teams actually won the league championship in the ACC Tournament.

The Tar Heels have won nine Tournament titles in this same stretch. Carolina has won either the ACC regular-season or Tournament championship 14 times in the past 18 years and has been to a national post-season tournament each of those 18 seasons.

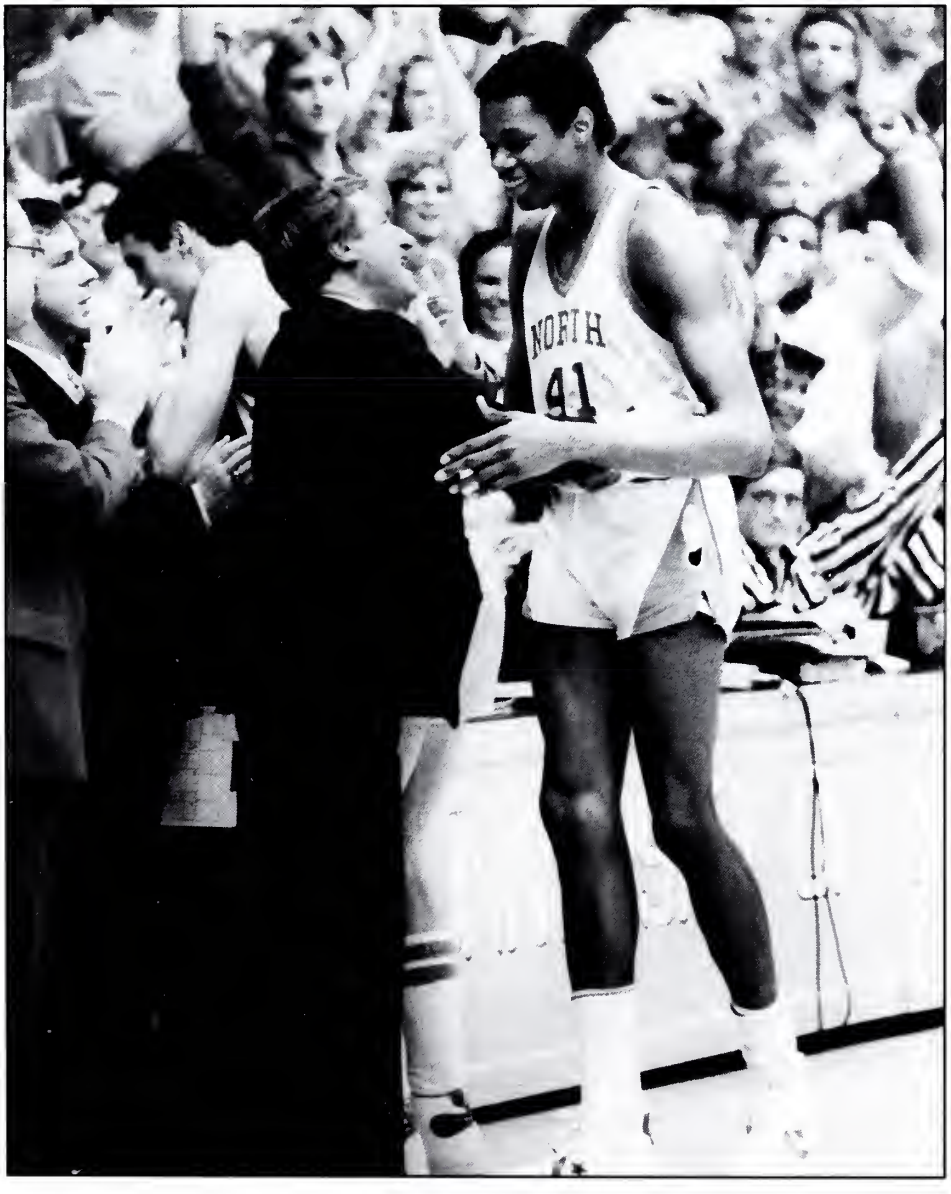
Despite his successes at Carolina, Smith's best-known accomplishment may have come elsewhere. In 1976 he guided the United States Basketball Team to a sweep of the Summer Olympic Games in Montreal. In only a few weeks he molded a college all-star team into a closely-knit unit. Still the Americans faced the tremendous challenge of competing against international teams which had been playing together for years.

But, with Smith emphasizing a tough pressure defense and fast-breaking team play on offense, the United States regained the Gold Medal it had lost in the controversial 1972 Games.

Four of Smith's Tar Heels played key roles in that Olympic triumph — Mitch Kupchak, Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and Phil Ford. In fact, Smith has had players on each of the last six Olympic teams: Larry Brown in 1964, Charlie Scott in 1968, Bobby Jones in 1972, the above four in 1976, Al Wood in 1980 and Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan last summer in Los Angeles.

How has Smith accomplished all this?

It's a combination of things. He has tremendous rapport with his players, he is a master teacher and his style of play gets amazing results.



Former Marquette Coach Al McGuire may have put it best when he said, "If anyone was ever born to be a college coach, it's Dean Smith. He's the Jack Armstrong type person."

John Gerdy, a former star player at Davidson, echoed McGuire's feelings.

"My example of a great coach is Dean Smith and not because of his record," said Gerdy. "Instead, look at the classy way in which both he and his players handle themselves. The Tar Heel program is the classiest in college basketball.

"Smith's players speak of him with nothing but respect. He sees to it that his players graduate, and they know that he'll stand behind them during their playing days and, more importantly, afterward."

Carolina teams under Smith are known for unselfish play, great teamwork and a tenacious man-to-man defense. Although the Tar Heels specialize in a whirlwind, fast-breaking offense, they also have a disciplined attack and always rank among the national leaders in field goal percentage.

In an NCAA study of the 1970's, Carolina ranked first in the nation in field goal percentage and offensive efficiency, fifth in scoring and third in scoring margin.

That ranking of fifth in scoring is really no surprise. Although Smith is sometimes kidded about coaching "slowdowns" because of the four corners offense he uses late in some games, his teams usually rank among the scoring leaders. In fact last year the Tar Heels again led the ACC in conference games' scoring, averaging 81.9 points.

Among Smith's many innovations are his run-and-jump defense, the mixing of pressure defenses, the point zone, team huddles at the foul line, the free lance passing game, the four corners offense and the scramble defense which first gained notoriety with the Dudley Bradley-led teams of the late 1970's and which has been extremely effective over the last four years — the best four-season period in school history.

"He is the most innovative, creative coach in college basketball," South Florida Coach Lee Rose once said of Smith. "Nobody is better. I've been coaching 20 years and I don't say that flippantly."

Smith's success at Carolina has been shared by those around him. Two of his former assistants, John Lotz and Kenny Rosemond, left Carolina to take head coaching jobs in the Southeastern Conference. Another former aide, Larry Brown, is now the head coach at Kansas. Smith's current assistants, Bill Guthridge and Eddie Fogler, have turned down head coaching jobs at major universities to remain in Chapel Hill. Smith, himself, has been offered numerous other coaching jobs, both on the college and professional level.

Interest of professional teams in Smith is no surprise. In the last 18 years alone, 28 of Smith's players have gone on to play pro basketball in this country and many others have played professionally in Europe.

Six of Smith's players have won pro rookie-of-the-year honors — Billy Cunningham, Charlie Scott, Robert McAdoo, Bobby Jones, Walter Davis and Phil Ford. It is no coincidence that so many Tar Heel players have been successful in the NBA. Carolina players seem to make the adjustment from college to the pros quite easily.

"Give me someone who has played for Dean Smith and I know they'll play hard every night," Cotton Fitzsimmons, coach of the San Antonio Spurs, once said. "These North Carolina kids take losses seriously. They have a lot of pride and that's a good trait."

Bobby Jones once gave Smith credit for his professional career in an interview with THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"If I had gone to any other school, I probably would not have been in pro basketball," said Jones. "I was a shy and gangly kid, not very well coordinated when I began playing basketball in junior high school. At North Carolina they gave me the tools to play in the pros and I don't want to forget it."

Of course, Smith's players have performed pretty well in college as well as in the pros. He has had more All-Americas than any other active coach. Last year Perkins and Jordan were consensus first-team All-Americas for the second straight year. On four occasions Smith's players have been named National Player of the Year — Ford in 1978, James Worthy in 1982 and Jordan in both 1983 and 1984.

A native of Emporia, Kansas, Smith attended the University of Kansas on an academic scholarship. He played freshman football and varsity basketball and baseball there. He was a member of Jayhawk basketball teams which won the national championship in 1952 and finished second in 1953.

Smith was assistant basketball coach and golf coach at the Air Force Academy in 1958 when he was brought to Carolina by Frank McGuire. He served as one of McGuire's assistants until being named head coach in 1961. That followed McGuire's departure to the NBA.

After taking Carolina to the NCAA title game in 1977, Smith was named National Coach of the Year by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. He received that same honor from the U.S. Basketball Writers Association in 1979 and from Medalist in 1982.

Smith is a great goodwill ambassador for the University. He is called upon to lecture at basketball clinics all over the world. He is a past president of the NABC. He was the only basketball coach among a group of college presidents who recently served on the NCAA Select Committee, which was appointed to study many of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics today.

Three years ago Smith was presented with the prestigous Golden Plate Award from the American Academy of Achievement which honors people from all fields. The only other coaches ever to receive that award have been Wooden, Bud Wilkinson, Bear Bryant, Joe Paterno and Tom Landry.

In his spare time Smith enjoys golf, tennis, music and reading. He has a special interest in theology.

Smith has five children. Daughters Sandy and Mrs. Sharon Kepley are Carolina graduates as is son Scott. Smith also has two younger daughters, Kristen Caroline and Kelly Marie. In addition he became the grandfather of Drew Kepley in 1983. Smith's wife, Linnea, is a physician.

Bill Guthridge

Heading into his 18th season on the University of North Carolina coaching staff is Bill Guthridge, possessor of one of the brightest minds in the game today.

In his role as Dean Smith's chief assistant, Guthridge is involved in all phases of the Tar Heel program. He has a thorough knowledge of all aspects of his profession — teaching, organizing, motivating and recruiting.

A 1960 Kansas State graduate, Guthridge has been connected with great teams throughout his basketball career. He played on three Wildcat teams which won Big Eight championships and has been a part of some of the greatest seasons in Tar Heel history.

In fact, Guthridge has been to the NCAA's Final Four a total of eight times — six as an assistant at Carolina, once as an assistant at Kansas State and once as a player.

"Bill is one of the top coaches in America, and that includes head coaches as well as assistants," says Smith. "His record as an assistant here and at Kansas State has been tremendous. He has made great contributions to both programs."

Guthridge first came to Chapel Hill for the 1967-68 season. The Tar Heels have been in a national post-season tournament in all of his 17 years here. In that 17-year period, Carolina has been first or second in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings each season, has won either the ACC regular-season or tournament title 13 times, won the NIT in 1971 and captured the NCAA championship in 1982.

Bill was also a key factor in the United States' 1976 basketball triumph in the summer Olympic Games. He and Georgetown's John Thompson served as Smith's assistants on that coaching staff and also scouted the Americans' opponents.

His reputation is so outstanding that Guthridge's name is usually mentioned every time there is a major college coaching vacancy. He has turned down several head coaching jobs and has had his name withdrawn from consideration for others.

Guthridge has worked a great deal with both Carolina's offensive and defensive schemes. He is currently the Tar Heel shooting instructor. It is no coincidence that Carolina annually shoots better than 50 percent from the field. In fact, the Tar Heels have the best shooting percentage of any team in the country over the last dozen years. Last season Carolina finished second in the nation in free throw shooting, setting a new school accuracy record in the process.

"Not only is Bill an excellent teacher, but he's also a great basketball technician," says Smith. "He has a superb understanding of the game."

A native of Parsons, Kan., Guthridge played his high school basketball for Harold Johnson, one of two brothers who were innovators of the zone press in the 1930's.

At Kansas State he helped the Wildcats win Big Eight championships in 1958, 1959 and 1960. Based on his leadership, academic record and athletic accomplishments, he was chosen one of the University's 13 most outstanding all-around seniors.

Following graduation, Guthridge coached for two years at Scott City (Kansas) High before returning to his alma mater as an assistant to Tex Winter. During his time on the KSU staff, the Wildcats posted a 93-43 record, swept two Big Eight titles and once advanced to the Final Four.

In his first six years at Carolina, Guthridge coached Tar Heel freshman and junior varsity teams. He had a 72-25 record and won the Big Four championship four times, an outstanding feat in those days.

Smith gives him much of the credit for helping develop the players who have kept Carolina among the top basketball powers in the nation.

Beside working with Smith and Winter, two of the great names in coaching, Guthridge has also coached in Puerto Rico summer leagues for two years. He was once named coach-of-the-year and was invited to coach the Puerto Rican team in the 1968 Olympics.

Of course, Guthridge's greatest notoriety has come for his work at Carolina.

"Bill is highly respected by the players who have been through our program," says Smith, "He is sincere in his recruiting and I think that has made him a favorite of prospective student-athletes and their families. He is a man of great integrity."

Unlike many coaches, Guthridge says he actually enjoys recruiting.

"Some people say recruiting is undesirable, that it's the worst part of being a college coach," he says. "But my experiences have been very enjoyable. I think that has a lot to do with the type of young man which our university attracts."

Bill is considered an excellent judge of talent at the high school level. When he believes a high school player can develop into an excellent college player, his past record indicates he's always right. Former Tar Heel star Bobby Jones is a prime example.

Guthridge, who got his B.S. in mathematics, has a master's degree in education and has taken courses at Carolina toward his PH.D.

Guthridge has an excellent sense of humor and is one of the most popular after-dinner speakers in the Carolina athletic department.

Bill and his wife, Leesie, have two sons, Jamie and Stuart, and a daughter, Megan.

Eddie Fogler

Eddie Fogler, who has been involved in some of Carolina's greatest seasons, is beginning his 12th year on the Tar Heel coaching staff.

Fogler played on Carolina teams which won Atlantic Coast Conference championships in 1968 and 1969, advancing to the NCAA's Final Four each year. In his 11 seasons as a full-time coach here, the Tar Heels have won seven ACC regular-season titles and five ACC Tournaments and been to a post-season tournament each year.

Counting his appearances as both a player and coach, Fogler has now been to the Final Four a total of six times. Very few people in college basketball can match that figure.

"Eddie brings a bright mind to the coaching profession," says Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith. "He really was like an assistant coach on the floor in his playing days here when he quarterbacked some of our championship teams. He's a hard worker and has great enthusiasm for the sport.

"Most people in basketball know what a truly outstanding coach he is. Even more would recognize that fact if Bill Guthridge had taken one of the many head coaching jobs he's been offered over the years. Eddie is going to be a great college head coach."

Fogler has a solid background in fundamental basketball. He learned the game as a youngster in New York City against excellent competition. He is one of the few players ever to make the all-city team twice.

Eddie then played in the backcourt on Tar Heel teams from 1967 to 1970. A playmaking guard, Fogler is considered one of the best passers and ball-handlers in school history. He still ranks as one of Carolina's all-time assist leaders.

In his three varsity seasons, the Tar Heels won 73 games and lost only 18. That's an average record of 25-6 each year. In addition to reaching the Final Four in 1968 and 1969, Carolina also played in the National Invitation Tournament in Fogler's senior season.

After receiving a bachelor's degree in mathematics in 1970, Fogler spent a year teaching and coaching at DeMatha High School in Washington, D.C. He was in charge of the DeMatha junior varsity.

He returned to Chapel Hill in the fall of 1971 as a graduate assistant on Smith's staff. Fogler worked that season with the Carolina freshmen and also helped with scouting and recruiting. He had his first coaching experience in the Final Four that year as Carolina reached the national semi-finals.

Fogler became a full-time assistant in 1973 and has made valuable contributions to the Tar Heel program. His work played a key role in helping Carolina reach the Final Four in 1977, 1981 and 1982. The Tar Heels won the national championship in 1982.

Fogler knows the game very well. He is an excellent teacher and a fine recruiter.

"Eddie has unusual sincerity in recruiting and he is an excellent recruiter because of that," says Smith. "He has a genuine love for the University and, as a result, he can present it well. Plus, he has a knack when recruiting players for accurately judging their future potential."

Like Guthridge, Fogler is a man in whom other schools show interest when they have a basketball staff opening. He has already received two head coaching opportunities at major universities, but has elected to remain in Chapel Hill.

Fogler enjoys all sports. He plays tennis and has a great interest in college football. He was married last spring to the former Robin Sowell.

Roy Williams

In six years as an assistant at North Carolina, Roy Williams has established himself as one of the best young coaches in college basketball.

Williams has coached the junior varsity, worked with the varsity and assisted in recruiting and scouting during his six seasons here. He has done an excellent job in all of those areas. In fact, he has had opportunities to take a top assistant's job at other schools, but has turned them down to remain at Carolina.

A native of Asheville, N.C., Williams played basketball and baseball at T.C. Roberson High School. He was a member of the freshman basketball team at Carolina during the 1968-69 season. He is a 1972 Tar Heel graduate and also got his master's degree here.

Prior to returning to Chapel Hill in 1978 as a member of Dean Smith's staff, Williams had spent five seasons as athletic director and head basketball coach at Owen High School in Swannanoa, N.C.

"Roy is a highly-organized person who has all the characteristics of a great coach," says Smith. "He genuinely cares a great deal for his players. He has been instrumental in the success we've had here in recent years. I predict that, when given the opportunity, he will prove to be a great college head coach. In fact, several college head coaches have come to Chapel Hill for advice and ideas from Roy."

Williams has certainly proven to be a fine coach at Carolina. His junior varsity teams, made up of non-scholarship players, have fared well in games against junior colleges and prep schools such as Laurinburg Institute and Fork Union Military Academy which have produced so many college scholarship players.

Williams is an avid golfer and shoots in the low 70's. Roy and his wife, Wanda, have a son, Scott, and a daughter, Kimberly.

Tar Heels In International Competition

When Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins helped spark the United States to a sweep of the basketball Gold Medal at last summer's Olympic Games in Los Angeles, it marked another in a long line of successes by University of North Carolina players on the international level.

In fact, it seems everytime the United States competes in major international basketball competition there is a Tar Heel player wearing Red, White and Blue.

Carolina players have distinguished themselves in the most highly visible international arenas — the Olympics, the Pan American Games and the World University Games. In addition, Tar Heel players have been involved in numerous other venues of international competition all over the world.

However, it has been in the biggest international event of them all, the Olympics, that Carolina players have been at their best and accomplished the most.

The latest Tar Heel Olympic stars are Jordan and Perkins who led the United States to an eight-game sweep of the Los Angeles Games. Both drew raves for their standout performances.

Jordan, the two-time National Player of the Year, was the leading American scorer with a 17.1 average. However, often it wasn't the number of points he scored as much as it was how he scored them that stunned the opposition. His long jumpers, driving dunks and stuff shots off steals left opponents shaking their heads, wondering what could be done to stop him. And since the alley-oop pass play isn't legal under international rules, they didn't even see him do some of the most amazing things that have awed Tar Heel opponents for the past three years.

Phil Ford on the move for the 1976 Olympians.

In the first of two U.S. games against Spain, Jordan was at his best. He made his last nine shots in a row, finishing 12 of 14 from the field for 24 points. He had a steal and 35-foot jumper at the buzzer to end the first half, giving the Americans a 46-41 lead. The U.S. was never headed after that and won, 101-68.

Like Jordan, Perkins was brilliant in Los Angeles. He may not have been as spectacular as Michael, but Perkins was just as valuable to the U.S. team. He was the team's third-leading rebounder and also scored over eight points a game. His inside defense was outstanding.

In fact, U.S. Coach Bob Knight spent more time praising Perkins than any of his other players. "Give me players like Sam Perkins and I'll coach forever," he said in Los Angeles.

Appropriately enough, Jordan and Perkins were the big stars in the Gold Medal game. Facing Spain for the second time in the tournament, the Americans won, 96-65. Jordan hit nine of 15 shots from the field and finished with 20 points. Perkins had 12 points and seven rebounds.

Before the Olympic Games began, the two Tar Heel stars had been named the U.S. co-captains. Their play in Los Angeles proved them more than worthy of that honor.

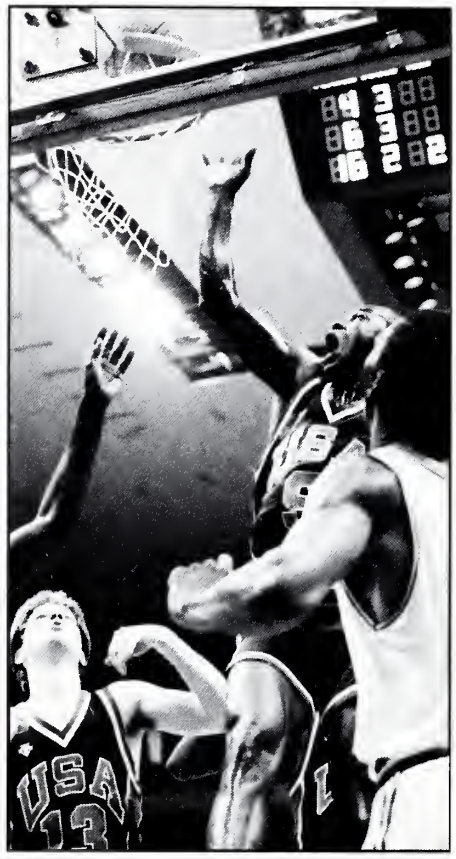
However, Carolina players starring in Olympic competition is really nothing new. The Tar Heels have now been represented on the last six U.S. Olympic teams.

The first Tar Heel Olympian was Larry Brown, a backcourt star of the early 1960's. Brown played on the winning 1964 U.S. team in Tokyo. Charlie Scott was a member of the 1968 team which swept the Olympic title in Mexico City. Bobby Jones was on the 1972 team at Munich.

Four Carolina players — Mitch Kupchak, Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and Phil Ford — were on the 1976 Olympic Team. All played key roles in the Americans' six-game sweep of the Summer Games.

Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith coached the U.S. team that year and was assisted by Bill Guthridge, his top aide at Carolina. Smith faced a tremendous challenge since the U.S. had been beaten by the Soviet Union in the controversial 1972 Games. His team had to win the Gold Medal to put the U.S. back on the top of the international basketball ladder. Another loss would have been disastrous for this country's basketball image.

Playing unselfishly on offense and stressing defense, the Americans routed Italy in their first game. After edging a fired-up Puerto Rican team on two clutch free throws by Ford, the U.S. squad then whipped Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Canada in the semi-finals.



Michael Jordan scores for 1984 U.S. Olympic Team.

After Yugoslavia had beaten the Soviets in the other semi-final, the Americans then defeated the Yugoslavs again for the Gold Medal.

Al Wood was one of the stars of the 1980 U.S. Olympic Team. The Americans, of course, did not compete in the Summer Games that year because of the Olympic boycott. However, the U.S. did compile a 5-1 record against professional competition in a series of exhibition games.

While the Olympics rank at the top of Carolina's international competition, there have been plenty of other outstanding performances.

Tar Heel players have been prominent in the last four Pan American Games. Jordan and Perkins helped the U.S. win the 1983 Games in Caracas. Perkins was regarded as the most consistent American player in that tournament, while Jordan was the last-second hero in a couple of come-from-behind victories.

Mike O'Koren was co-captain of the 1979 U.S. team which won the Gold Medal in Puerto Rico. Tommy LaGarde starred on the 1975 U.S. team and Robert McAdoo played on the American team in 1971.

In addition to his Pan American play, O'Koren was also a starting forward on the U.S. team which took part in the Gregarian Cup competition in Moscow in 1978. LaGarde was a member of the U.S. Continental Cup Team which played games in the Soviet Union, Greece, Yugoslavia and other parts of Europe in 1975.

Dennis Wuycik played on the U.S. pre-Olympic team which toured Europe in 1971. In the summer of 1973, a Soviet national team came to America, playing a U.S. all-star team. Two of the biggest stars in that series of games were George Karl and Bobby Jones.

Later that summer Karl became one of the first Americans in decades to visit Mainland China. He was a member of a U.S. basketball team which played there and again, he was one of the American heroes.

In the fall of 1973, Kupchak played on the U.S. team which won the basketball championship at the World University Games in Moscow.

Jordan was on a U.S. all-star team which toured Europe in the summer of 1982. Then in the summer of 1983, Matt Doherty played on the U.S. Select Team in Southeast Asia. During that same summer, Steve Hale was in Europe with a team sponsored by Athletes in Action. Last summer Brad Daugherty played on the team which represented the U.S. in the William Jones Cup Tournament in Taiwan. He was the leading American rebounder as the U.S. team posted a 9-0 record to win the championship.

Carolina took its entire team to Madrid, Spain in 1971 and played in the International Christmas Tournament there. The Tar Heels swept past teams from Brazil and Spain before facing Real Madrid, the European champion, in the finals. In a game televised across Europe, the Tar Heels gave one of their finest performances to win the championship.

Carolina returned to Madrid in 1974, but was edged by the veteran Real Madrid club in the tournament finals. The Tar Heels did pull a stunning upset, however, beating the powerful Cuban National Team on a remarkable last-second, half-court shot by Walter Davis.

In 1979 Carolina took part in a Christmas tournament in London. The Tar Heels played in Greece prior to last season, winning four games against club teams from Italy and Greece and the Greek National Team. Jordan won one of those games with a last-second shot after a steal by Perkins. Those two were joined by Buzz Peterson on the all-tournament team.

Carolina players have also made big names for themselves playing professional basketball in Europe. Doug Moe had the most success there, three times being selected European Player of the Year. Other Tar Heels who have played in Europe include Dave Chadwick, Kim Huband, Craig Corson, Donn Johnston, John O'Donnell, Donald Washington, Ed Stahl, Bill Chambers, Bruce Buckley, Tom Zaliagiris, Geff Crompton, Randy Wiel, Jeff Wolf, Rich Yonakor, Pete Budko, Tommy LaGarde, John Virgil, Chris Brust and Jeb Barlow.

Carolina Basketball — A Tradition of Success

Winning basketball teams are nothing new at the University of North Carolina. Success in basketball is as traditional in Chapel Hill as the Old Well itself.

But, even Tar Heel fans have to shake their heads in amazement at what Carolina has accomplished in the past four years. In a history filled with excitement, this four-year stretch may go down as the most incredible era of all.

During the past four seasons the Tar Heels have won 117 games. That's the winningest four-year period in Atlantic Coast Conference history and one of the most successful in all of college basketball.

Only Adolph Rupp's greatest Kentucky teams in the late 1940's ever won more games in a similar period. The Wildcats won 130 games from 1946 to 1949. No one else has surpassed Carolina's total of 117. UCLA had that same total between 1970 and 1973.

In this four-year period, Carolina has reached the Final 16 of the NCAA Tournament each season. The Tar Heels won the national championship in 1982 and were second in 1981.

Carolina has finished first in the ACC regular-season race for the last three years. The Tar Heels' four-season record in ACC play is 48-8. That includes an unbelievable 14-0 mark last year when the conference was supposed to have its greatest balance ever.

What makes this four-year record even more amazing is the fact Carolina has done all this while playing against the best competition in the country. Last year, for example, 22 of the Tar Heels' 31 opponents appeared in national post-season tournaments. Despite that, Carolina posted a 28-3 record and was ranked as the number one team in the country every week of the season. Considering the competitiveness of college basketball today, being regarded as the nation's best team every week of the year may be the most astounding feat of all.

These four year have done nothing but solidify Carolina's reputation as the premier basketball program in the country. Mention the Tar Heels anywhere in basketball circles and people immediately think of championship teams, All-America players and great coaching. Success on the basketball court has been a tradition here for over seven decades.

The first intercollegiate game at Carolina was played in 1911. Since that time the Tar Heels have posted a record of 1,317 victories against only 492 losses. Sixty-four of the school's 74 teams have had winning records.

Only Kentucky has won more games than Carolina and the Wildcats began playing the sport eight years before the Tar Heels. Kentucky and Carolina also have the best won-loss percentages in collegiate history.

Carolina is one of only six schools to capture both an NCAA championship and a National Invitation Tournament title. The Tar Heels won NCAA crowns in 1957 and 1982 and swept the NIT in 1971. Carolina was also voted national champion in 1924 with a 26-0 record.

Since the NCAA Tournament was first played, Carolina has been one of the most dominant teams in the game. The Heels have been one of the final four teams in the NCAA Tournament nine times. Only UCLA with 13 appearances has reached the Final Four more often.

Carolina has made seven trips to the Final Four in the last 18 years. In this period of time, again only UCLA has made more (11).

The Tar Heels have won eight NCAA regional titles, including seven eastern championships. No one else has won more than three eastern crowns.

ACC teams have now made 17 trips to the Final Four. Carolina has accounted for eight of those.

The Tar Heels have dominated ACC basketball in an 18-year period stretching back to 1967. In that time Carolina has finished first in the league's regular-season race 12 times and second on the other six occasions. This 18-year stretch of finishing first or second in its conference standings has never been equalled by any other school in any league.

The Tar Heels have played in a national post-season tournament each of the past 18 years. The 1967, 1968, 1969, 1972, 1975, 1977, 1979, 1981 and 1982 teams won ACC Tournament titles. Carolina won NCAA regional championships in 1967, 1968, 1969, 1972, 1977, 1981, and 1982.

The 1970, 1971, 1973, and 1974 teams went to the NIT in New York. Those trips, of course, came before the NCAA Tournament was expanded to include more than one team from each conference. The Tar Heels have been in the NCAA field every year since 1975. That stretch of 10 straight NCAA appearances is the longest current streak in the nation.

In fact, no freshman class since 1963 has missed a post-season tournament and only two, 1972 and 1973, have failed to go to the Final Four.

In the last 18 years Carolina has won 458 games and lost 109. That's a winning percentage of .808 and an average of 25-5 a season. During the last 10 years Carolina has won more games than any school in the nation.

The Tar Heels have finished in the top 10 of one of the wire service polls 14 times in the last 18 seasons. Eight times the Tar Heels have finished the year ranked as one of the top four teams in America. Only UCLA has been there more often in this stretch.

Although the Tar Heels have gained a lot of notoriety for the four-corners offense they use late in some games, they actually rank as one of the nation's highest-scoring teams in recent years. Carolina runs one of the best fast breaks in basketball and has averaged over 81 points a game since 1967.

However, the key to Carolina's success may be its changing man-to-man defenses. The Tar Heels mix their innovative and gambling scramble defense with their more conservative pressure man-to-man. In fact, Carolina's defense is so effective it actually helps the offense. Steals and easy layups have accounted for many Tar Heel points over the years. That's one of the reasons Carolina has the best shooting percentage in the country over the last 18 seasons. Carolina has hit at least 51 percent of its shots from the floor for an incredible 14 consecutive years. That percentage, of course, has also been helped by the unselfishness of the Tar Heel players in selecting only the best shots.

Many people refer to basketball as "a tournament sport" and the Tar Heels have excelled in tournament play. Carolina, in fact, has now won 52 tournament championships. The Tar Heels have competed in such events as the Holiday Festival in New York City, the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu, the Sugar Bowl Classic in New Orleans, the Great Alaskan Shootout in Anchorage and the Far West Classic in Portland.

Carolina has had at least one player on each of the last six U.S. Olympic basketball teams — Larry Brown in 1964; Charlie Scott in 1968; Bobby Jones in 1972; Walter Davis, Phil Ford, Mitch Kupchak and Tommy LaGarde in 1976; Al Wood in 1980; and Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins in 1984.

There have been dozens of All-Americas at Carolina. Sixteen of them have played in the Dean Smith Era alone — Billy Cunningham, Bob Lewis, Larry Miller, Charlie Scott, Dennis Wuycik, Bill Chamberlain, Robert McAdoo, Bobby Jones, Mitch Kupchak, Tommy LaGarde, Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren, Al Wood, James Worthy, Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan.

In the last decade Carolina players have been named consensus first-team All-America seven times. No other school has had that many first-team selections.

When Jordan was a unanimous choice as college basketball's National Player of the Year last season, it marked the eighth time a Tar Heel had been so honored. Jordan won that same award from The Sporting News in 1983 and Worthy had been named Co-National Player of the Year by the Helms Foundation in 1982. Other Tar Heels who were chosen as the best player in America were Jack Cobb in 1926, George Glamack in 1940 and 1941, Lennie Rosenbluth in 1957 and Ford in 1978.

The crowds which turn out to see the Tar Heels play are proof of the sport's popularity in Chapel Hill. Every game is a sellout in Carmichael Auditorium. Students sleep at the auditorium the night before they are to pick up tickets just to be sure they get into the games. Educational Foundation members who contribute large amounts of money to the athletic program are limited to just two tickets. Faculty members have to go on waiting lists to get into games. Even the Tar Heel intrasquad games are 10,000 sellouts. That's why the University is now constructing a new 22,000-seat arena.

Most regular-season Tar Heel games are televised. Four Carolina games will be nationally-televised this year by either NBC or CBS with many others being broadcast across the country on cable. In fact, 21 of the Tar Heels' 31 games were shown nationally last season.

The interest in the program and the accomplishments of the team make it easy to see that, paraphrasing an old song, nothing could be finer than basketball at Carolina.

Carmichael Auditorium

The home of the North Carolina Tar Heels is Carmichael Auditorium, or "Blue Heaven" as it is known to Carolina fans.

But, it is not exactly a heaven for visiting teams as few of them win in Chapel Hill. In fact, the Tar Heel record at home stands at 157-18 since the arena opened in 1965.

However, this will be the final year of varsity competition in Carmichael. The Tar Heels will move into the new Student Activities Center at the start of the 1985-86 season. The new arena will offer many more seats for Carolina fans. Those seats are desperately needed.

Carmichael is always packed with overflow crowds of partisan Tar Heel supporters. Every home game is a sellout before the season even begins. The only way a non-student can get a ticket to Carmichael is to be a large contributor to the Educational Foundation. Even pre-season scrimmages and exhibition games are sellouts.

Located in the tall pine trees at the heart of the Carolina campus, Carmichael is a very attractive setting for basketball. It simply isn't big enough to handle the number of people who want to see the Tar Heels play.

The auditorium has been the home of 12 Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season championship teams, nine ACC Tournament winners, seven NCAA regional champions and one NCAA champion.

Students wait in long lines for a chance to see a game in Carmichael. In fact, they often sleep outside the auditorium the night before tickets are distributed for games.

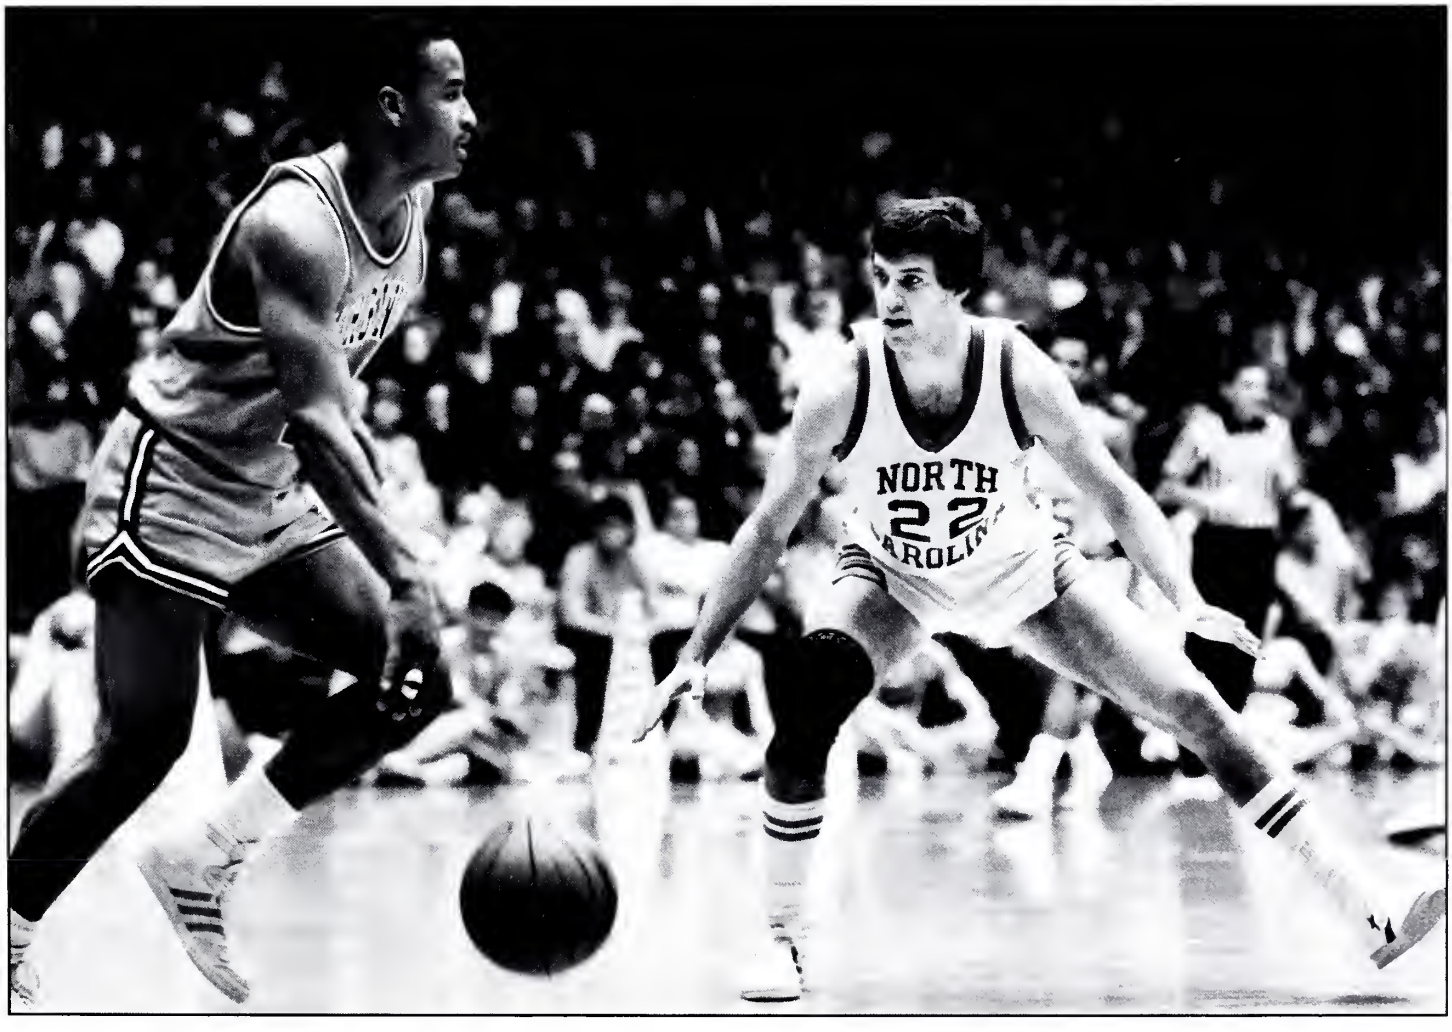
Several hundred seats were added to Carmichael after the 1975-76 season, pushing capacity from 8,800 to 10,000.

Most of the Carolina athletic department offices are located in Carmichael. Athletic Director John Swofford and Basketball Coach Dean Smith have their offices there. The halls are lined with sketches of Carolina's most outstanding athletes and there are five trophy cases containing awards and pictures from all sports.

The auditorium is named for the late William D. Carmichael, Jr., one of the most popular gentlemen ever to serve on the University campus. He left a lucrative Wall Street business to become associated with Carolina.

In Chapel Hill, Carmichael was comptroller and later vice-president of the Consolidated University. He also served for a long time as the Consolidated University's acting president. He died in 1961.

The auditorium adjoins Woollen Gymnasium, long-time site of varsity competition and physical education and intramural activities.



Cheers From Carmichael's Past

A whole lot of memories will be left behind when North Carolina plays its final basketball game in Carmichael Auditorium on February 23.

Next season the Tar Heels will play in the 21,800-seat Student Activities Center. Carmichael seats just around 10,000 and the move to the new building is needed so thousands of more Carolina fans can see the Tar Heels play.

Still, Carmichael Auditorium will remain a special place to many people. It has been the home of a great number of the University's finest championship teams. Many of the greatest players in school history have performed there. It has been the site of sensational games, unusual happenings and wild finishes.

Ask 10 Tar Heel fans to name their most memorable moment in Carmichael and you could well get 10 different answers.

There were the miracle shots of Walter Davis and Michael Jordan, Jeff Wolf's in-your-face dunks against Ralph Sampson, the night Gerald Tuttle hit a hook shot while on his knees, a school record 49 points by Bob Lewis . . . The list is an all but endless one.

But, to the people who were there (and to those who weren't, but now claim to have been), it would be tough to match the final 17 seconds of the Carolina-Duke game on March 2, 1974.

Down 86-78 with just 17 seconds on the clock, the Tar Heels made one of the most incredible comebacks in basketball history to win in overtime, 96-92.

This amazing rally started innocently enough with Bobby Jones on the free throw line. Jones, who hit only 61.7 percent of his foul shots that year, made two to cut the lead to six.

Walter Davis then stole Duke's inbounds pass and fed John Kuester for a layup. The Tar Heels took a quick timeout with 12 seconds on the clock, trailing by four.

Duke's next inbounds pass was fumbled and Davis again came up with the ball. He missed a long jumper, but Jones tipped it in with six seconds remaining. Again, a Tar Heel timeout stopped the clock. Duke's lead was now 86-84.

Finally, the Blue Devils worked an inbounds play and Pete Kramer was immediately fouled. Four seconds were left.

Kramer's free throw refused to drop, Ed Stahl rebounded and again Carolina took a timeout. Only three seconds remained to be played and the Tar Heels had the ball out-of-bounds under their own basket.

Mitch Kupchak's inbounds pass went to Davis at mid-court. He took a quick dribble and fired a 40-foot jumper. The ball hit the backboard and banked in!

Carmichael was in bedlam!

Fans stormed the court, grabbing Davis. Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith later joked that the reaction was such that he at first thought Carolina had won the game, that maybe he had been looking at the scoreboard wrong all along.

It took several minutes before order could be restored. In that time Smith tried to emphasize to his players not to let up — the game had not been won yet.

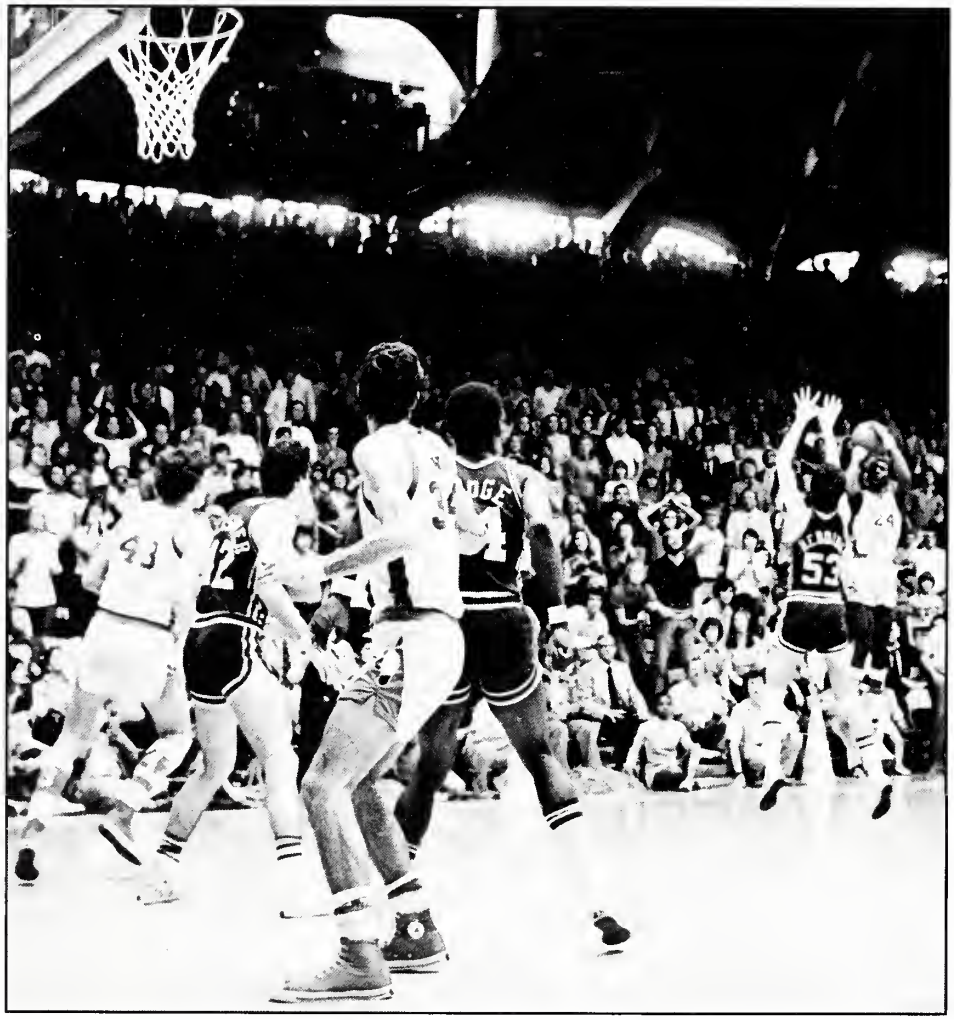
He was right. The Blue Devils took a quick four-point lead in the overtime period. But, the Tar Heels came back again, winning, 96-92.

Davis, just a freshman at the time, hit 14 of 21 field goal attempts and scored a career-high 31 points. Jones made 11 of 18 shots from the floor and had 24 points and 10 rebounds.

That game, more than any other, has changed coaching strategy in basketball. Smith had long been a proponent of saving timeouts until late in a game. Other coaches were able to see how valuable those timeouts could be when used wisely. Now every coach tries to save as many timeouts as possible to use in late-game situations.

Nine years later there was another dramatic comeback in Carmichael, one which attracted even more attention nationally from fans since it matched the top two teams in the country against each other — top-ranked Carolina and second-rated Virginia.

Virginia led by 16 with less than nine minutes to play and still had a 63-53 lead with 4:12 on the clock. The Cavaliers never scored again and the Tar Heels rolled off 11 straight points for a



Walter Davis hits a half-court shot at the buzzer to force overtime against Duke in 1974.

64-63 victory.

Jim Braddock started that streak with a three-point field goal. After Matt Doherty and Sam Perkins each added two free throws, the score was 63-60 with 2:54 left. Then Michael Jordan took control.

It was Jordan who went around Ralph Sampson to tip in a missed three-point attempt by Braddock with 1:07 to play. Then as the Cavaliers were bringing the ball upcourt, Jordan took it away from Rick Carlisle. He went in for a stuff that brought Carolina to the lead and the noise level in Carmichael to perhaps an all-time high.

When Carlisle missed Virginia's last shot, Jordan got the rebound and the Tar Heels had another incredible victory.

Two other games between Carolina and Sampson's Virginia teams also would make a highlight film for any Tar Heel fan. The 1980 showdown was a surprising 68-51 blowout for Carolina. The Tar Heels outscored the Cavaliers 26-6 early in the second half to break the game open.

The big star for Carolina that night was center Jeff Wolf. Wolf, who averaged just 3.2 points a game during the season, had 12 against Sampson. With Carolina holding only a 46-36 lead in the second half, Wolf drove past the great Virginia center for a slam dunk. A minute later he did the same thing. Carmichael was in an uproar, Virginia took a timeout and the Tar Heels rolled to a big victory. Almost unnoticed was a great performance by Mike O'Koren who grabbed 13 rebounds and hounded Jeff Lamp defensively.

Two years later, in a nationally-televised game, Sampson was sensational. He scored 30 points and pulled down 19 rebounds. Sparked by his play the Cavaliers had an eight-point lead and seemed in control when Jimmy Black fouled out with 7:23 to play.

However, with Braddock supplying good play off the bench, Carolina stormed back and took the lead for good on a pair of Sam Perkins free throws with 1:48 remaining. After a missed Virginia shot, the Tar Heels went to their four corners attack. Four foul shots by Braddock and a dunk by Perkins resulted in a 65-60 final. James Worthy was the big star for Carolina with 17 points and nine rebounds.

One of Carmichael's oldest traditions is the honoring of seniors playing their final home games. Rarely have those days seen celebrations like the ones in 1970, 1978 and 1984.

Virginia Tech was the opponent in 1970 when Charlie Scott made his final home appearance. The Tar Heels won going away, 98-70, with Scott scoring 28 points, grabbing 13 rebounds and handing out five assists.

Michael Jordan's 30-footer with two seconds left forces overtime against Tulane in 1982.

However, just before he was to check out of the game, Scott missed a jump shot. He went to the bench to a thunderous ovation, but had missed his last shot at Carmichael.

At least, it seemed that way. With just seconds left Coach Dean Smith put Scott back in the game and in moments, he had a steal and a breakaway layup for his final points in Chapel Hill.

The 1978 Duke game was a going-away party for Phil Ford, the national player of the year in his final season. Unfortunately, the guests tried their best to ruin things. Duke, under Coach Bill Foster, had one of its finest teams and led 44-40 early in the second half.

Ford then scored 12 of Carolina's next 13 points and finally got the Tar Heels even when he fed O'Koren for a dunk at 58-58. Carolina went to its four corners attack with six minutes left. The Blue Devils stayed close, but a pair of free throws by Ford with six seconds to play gave the Tar Heels their final 87-83 edge. Ford played all 40 minutes, hit 13 of 19 field goal attempts, handed out five assists and finished with a career-high 34 points.

Duke was again the opponent in 1984 when Perkins, Matt Doherty and Cecil Exum closed their home careers. The Blue Devils got a three-point play from Mark Alarie to take a 73-71 lead with just 20 seconds to go. A missed Carolina shot and a rebound by Dan Meagher put the Blue Devils in great position with nine seconds left. Meagher was fouled and at the free throw line. But, he missed and the Tar Heels still had life.

Doherty took an inbounds pass after a timeout and looked for Jordan. But when Michael was covered, Doherty took off himself. It was his jumper from the left of the lane at the buzzer which forced overtime.

The two teams were still tied after the first extra period, but in the second overtime Jordan scored on a spectacular three-point play, tipping in an errant lob pass and getting fouled in the process. Carolina scored the last 10 points of the game for a 96-83 triumph.

Perkins had 25 points and 12 rebounds. Jordan, in what turned out to also be his final home appearance, scored 27.

Jordan was the hero more than just once during his time in Carmichael. He pulled the Tar Heels out of what seemed to be another impossible situation in November, 1982 against Tulane. The Green Wave had a two-point lead and the ball out-of-bounds in front of the Carolina bench with just four seconds in the game. However, the inbounds pass was tipped. Jordan grabbed the ball and fired in a 30-footer at the buzzer, forcing overtime. The Tar Heels eventually won in triple overtime, 70-68.

Later that season he came from nowhere to block a layup by Chuck Driesell with only one second on the clock, preserving a 72-71 win over Maryland.

It was Al Wood who blocked a last-second Wake Forest shot in 1978, giving the Tar Heels a 71-69 win over the Deacons. However, it was an offensive play Wood made against Wake Forest in 1980 which most Tar Heel fans will never forget.

With Carolina trailing 58-56 midway in the second half, Wood hit a long jump shot to tie the game. Moments later he got a breakaway layup. Wake's Benny McCaig chased after him and as Wood was going up to shoot McCaig wrapped his arms around him to prevent him from getting off a shot.

Somehow, Wood still was able to release the ball and, incredibly, it went in! In addition, Wood made two free throws for the intentional foul. The Tar Heels had a four-point lead and never trailed again.

One of Carolina's most stunning wins in Carmichael came January 4, 1971. South Carolina came to Chapel Hill, ranked second in the country. However, the Tar Heels blew out to a 40-26 halftime lead behind the play of George Karl, Dennis Wuycik and Bill Chamberlain. Karl was four-for-four from the field and five-for-five from the foul line in the first half.

The final was 79-64. Karl finished with 17 points. Also in double figures were Wuycik, Chamberlain, Lee Dedmon and Kim Huband. Chamberlain pulled down 12 rebounds and the Carolina defense held the Gamecocks to a shooting accuracy of just 38.3 percent.

Three times in the last six years Carolina has beaten the eventual national champion in Carmichael. The Tar Heels defeated Michigan State, 70-69, in December of 1978 as O'Koren had 18 points and 10 rebounds. Magic Johnson scored 18 points and had six rebounds and six assists, but was pushed into making eight turnovers by the defense of Dudley Bradley. In fact, the tempo of that game was set on the Spartans' first possession when Bradley took the ball away from Magic and scored on a breakaway dunk.

Indiana's national champions fell, 65-56, in December, 1980. Jimmy Black scored nine second-half points after going scoreless in the first period. Black, Wood, Worthy and Perkins made big plays down the stretch as Carolina came from behind to win.

In N.C. State's 1983 championship season, the Wolfpack lost in Carmichael, 99-81, as five Tar Heels scored in double figures and Warren Martin kept the arena jumping with two ferocious slam dunks.

All of these games have helped build the mystique of Carmichael Auditorium, a building where Carolina has won 157 games and lost only 18. Despite the Tar Heels' great record there, newspaper surveys have discovered that opposing players don't dislike the place. They have said it's noisy and hot in Carmichael, but that the building is really a pretty good place to play.

There are reasons for that. Fans in Carmichael will boo what they consider bad calls by officials, as fans do everywhere. But, at Carmichael there are no organized chants of obscenities or arm-waving behind a basket as a player attempts a free throw. In fact, fans actually will applaud a great play by an opposing player.

That, of course, has nothing to do with the building itself, but instead with the people in it. The class Tar Heel fans and students have displayed over the years has been as outstanding as some of Carolina's finest teams.

That shouldn't change simply because games will be played in a new building next year. The changes will be in the building, not in the people who are part of and follow the Tar Heels' amazing basketball program.

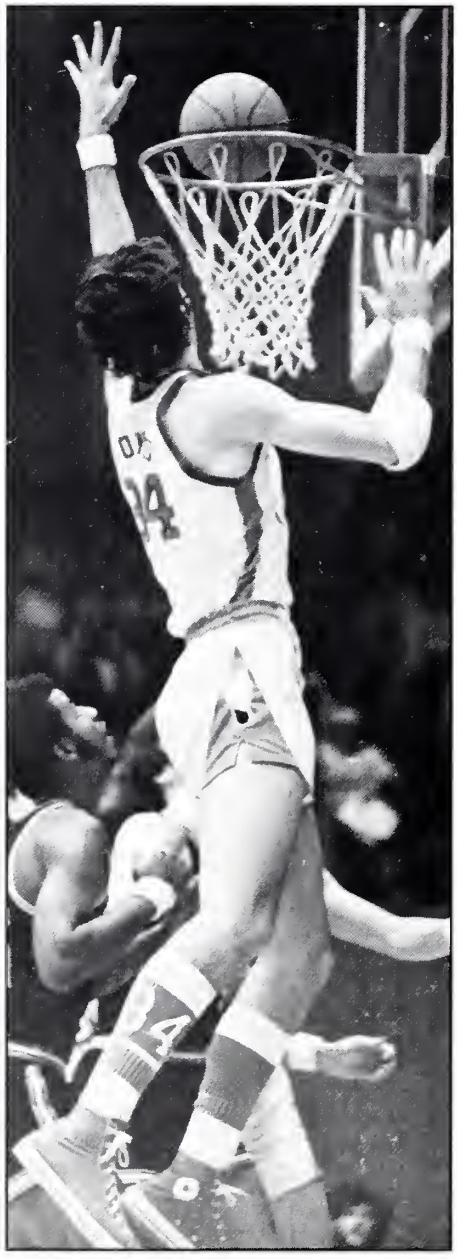
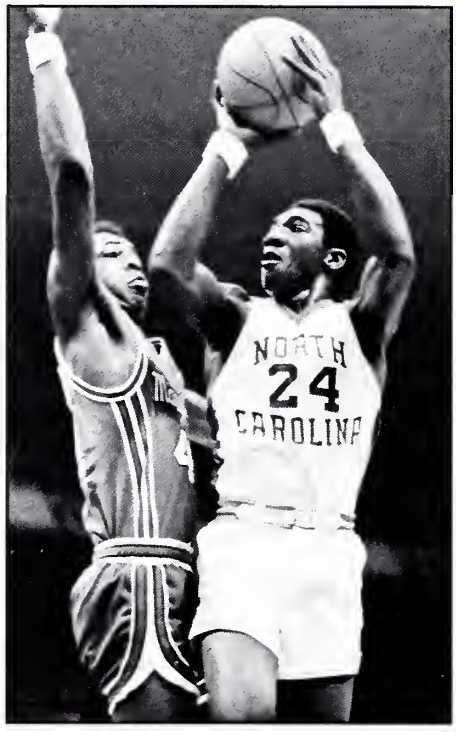
Carolina's Greatest Players

Out of the exciting past of Carolina basketball have come some of the greatest names the game has ever known — from Cartwright Carmichael and Jack Cobb of the Roaring Twenties to Billy Cunningham and Larry Miller of the Sizzling Sixties to Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan of the Ecstatic Eighties.

The list of Tar Heel superstars is an all but endless one. There have been scores of all-conference players, numerous All-Americas and six National Players of the Year. Many Tar Heel players have gone on to become standouts in professional basketball as well.



Bobby Jones



Walter Davis

Who has been the best of them all? Well, singling out Carolina's greatest player would be like trying to choose the brightest star in the heavens. The possibilities are just too many.

Most fans who try to make such a choice are biased because they saw a particular player give an incredible performance that can never be erased from their minds. They are convinced their favorite player is the Tar Heels' all-time best because they were there the night he hit a miraculous game-winning shot, or played a flawless floor game or dominated a heralded opponent.

That is fun for fans, but a concrete, objective answer is impossible. How do you compare the abilities of a forward like James Worthy with those of a guard like Phil Ford or those of a recent star with those of one who played 25 years ago?

You can't and we won't. Instead we will simply furnish the names of some amazing young athletes who have helped make Carolina the most magical name in college basketball today.

All of this started back in 1911 when Carolina fielded its first team. Marvin

Phil Ford

James Worthy

Ritch captained that squad, but history does not tell us how great a player he was.

However, history does tell a lot about Carolina's first great team — the 1924 national champions. The Tar Heels were 26-0 and led by Cartwright Carmichael, Jack Cobb and Monk McDonald.

While the style of play has changed drastically since then, these men are still recognized as three of Carolina's greatest stars. Cobb, in fact, is a member of the Helms Basketball Hall of Fame. He was a three-time All-America and the Helms National Player of the Year in 1926. Carmichael was twice named All-America and McDonald was an all-conference performer.

Although the Tar Heels did not have an All-America like Cobb or Carmichael in the 1930's, there were many outstanding players. Ivan (Jack) Glace, Earl Ruth, Virgil Weathers, Tom Alexander, Jim McCachren and Stewart (Snooks) Aitken made the All-Southern Conference team during that decade.

The big star of the early 1940's was George Glamack — "the Blind Bomber." Glamack had terrible eyesight and could barely see the basket while standing right under it. However, he developed the uncanny sense of knowing where the hoop was in relation to his position on the court. He perfected a hook shot which he used with either hand and with great accuracy. He was a two-time All-America and Helms Player of the Year in 1941. He's now in the Hall of Fame.

All-America John (Hook) Dillon was the star of the 1946 team which lost to Oklahoma A&M and big Bob Kurland in the national finals. Dillon, however, had an excellent supporting cast in Jim Jordan, Bones McKinney, Jim White and Bob Paxton. Jordan, in fact, had been an All-America in 1945 and the Most Valuable Player in the Southern Conference.

Eleven years later the Tar Heels again reached the national finals. This time they won the NCAA title, defeating Wilt Chamberlain and Kansas in a triple-overtime thriller that rates among the greatest college games ever.

Lennie Rosenbluth was the star of that team. He was named National Player of the Year as Carolina went 32-0. Other starters on that unforgettable team were Pete Brennan (an All-America the following season), Tommy Kearns, Joe Quigg and Bob Cunningham.

The stars were many during the 1960's. Big Lee Shaffer was the Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year in 1960. Shaffer was a great scorer and later was an all-star performer in the National Basketball Association with the Syracuse Nationals.

Mike O'Koren

York Larese and Doug Moe also starred for the Tar Heels in the early part of the decade. Larese ranks as one of the greatest free throw shooters in Carolina history. Moe was a sensational all-around star and now coaches in the NBA.

A teammate of Moe's was Larry Brown, a dimunitive guard who rates as one of Carolina's finest playmakers. Brown played on the 1964 U.S. Olympic team which swept the Gold Medal.

Bob Lewis, a thin sharpshooter from Washington, D.C., followed Cunningham into the Tar Heel spotlight. He holds the Carolina single-game scoring record with 49 points against Florida State.

Next came Larry Miller, an All-America in 1968 when he led his team to the national finals where the Tar Heels lost to Lew Alcindor and UCLA. Miller twice was named the ACC Player of the Year. At 6-4 and 215 pounds, he was a rugged performer who dazzled crowds with driving layups and a great variety of shots.

Al Wood

Billy Cunningham, a three-time All-ACC selection, was the next star on the Carolina scene. He made All-America in 1965. The "Kangaroo Kid" went on to become a great professional star with the Philadelphia 76ers and now coaches that team.

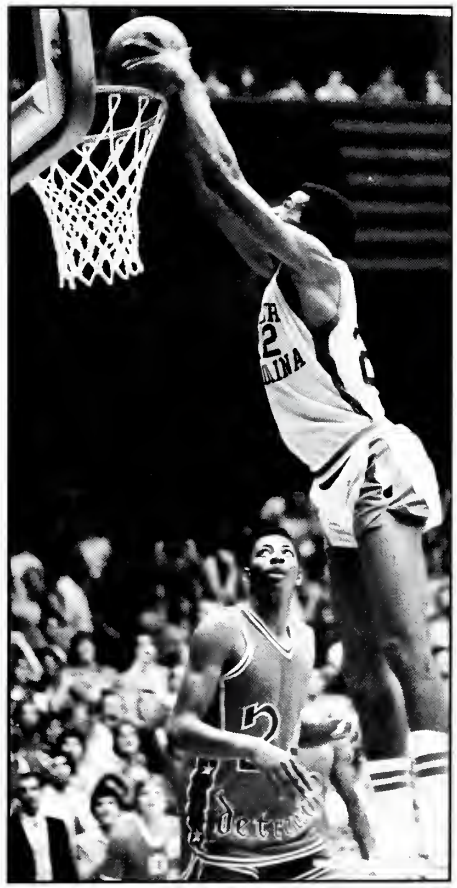
Bill Bunting, Rusty Clark and Dick Grubar were starters on Carolina teams which won three straight ACC regular-season and tournament championships, swept three Eastern Regionals in a row and went to the final four in the nation.

Bunting had a great senior season and made All-ACC. Grubar was one of the most popular athletes to wear Carolina Blue and was a sparkling playmaker and defender. Clark was a tough defensive player and a great rebounder.

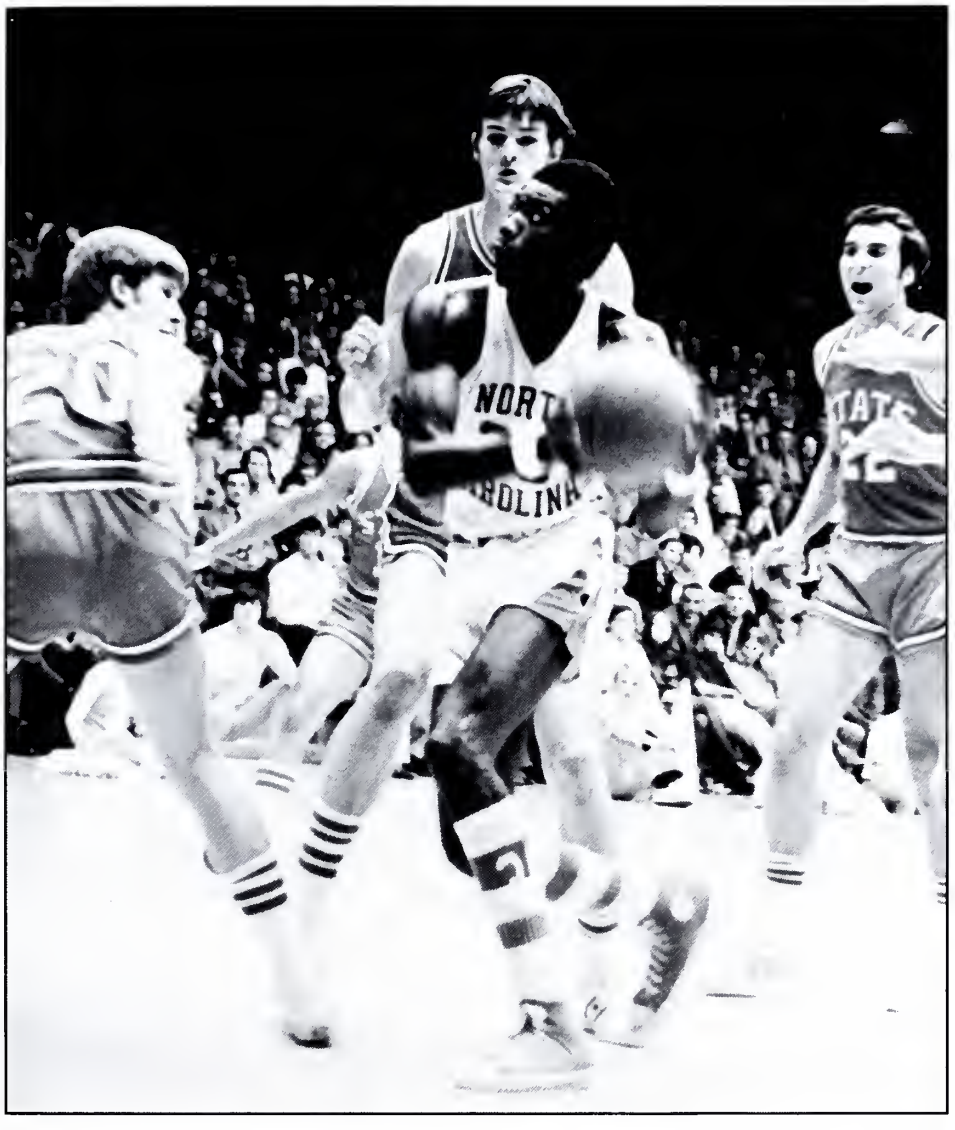
Then there was Charlie Scott, who excelled in every phase of the game. He made All-America in his senior season and was voted ACC Athlete of the Year. In 1968 he starred for the United States in the Olympic Games.

Three fine frontcourt players — Bill Chamberlain, Dennis Wuycik and Robert McAdoo — sparked Carolina teams in the early 1970's. Chamberlain was the Most Valuble Player in the 1971 National Invitation Tournament as the Tar Heels swept that title. Wuycik was a fine shooter and an aggressive rebounder. McAdoo had a great shooting touch and was an excellent rebounder. They led the Tar Heels to the NCAA's Final Four in 1972.

Another All-ACC performer in that period was George Karl, a three-year



Dudley Bradley



Bob McAdoo

starter and a highly popular player. He amazed fans with his daring and diving on the court.

One of the most complete players to play the college game was Bobby Jones. Jones had great quickness and was a superb defender. He's one of the NBA's biggest stars.

Another great all-around player was Mitch Kupchak, the 1976 ACC Player of the Year. Mitch led the Tar Heels to a 25-4 record in his senior season and played a key role in the Washington Bullets' 1978 NBA championship.

Then came Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and John Kuester. They played on Carolina teams which won 98 games and lost only 23. All three were excellent defensive players and good shooters.

Davis, in fact, is regarded as one of the greatest clutch players in Carolina history. He's a former NBA Rookie of the Year and an all-pro performer. Kuester was the Most Valuable Player in both the ACC Tournament and the Eastern Regionals as a senior. LaGarde was an All-America on the team chosen by the pro coaches.

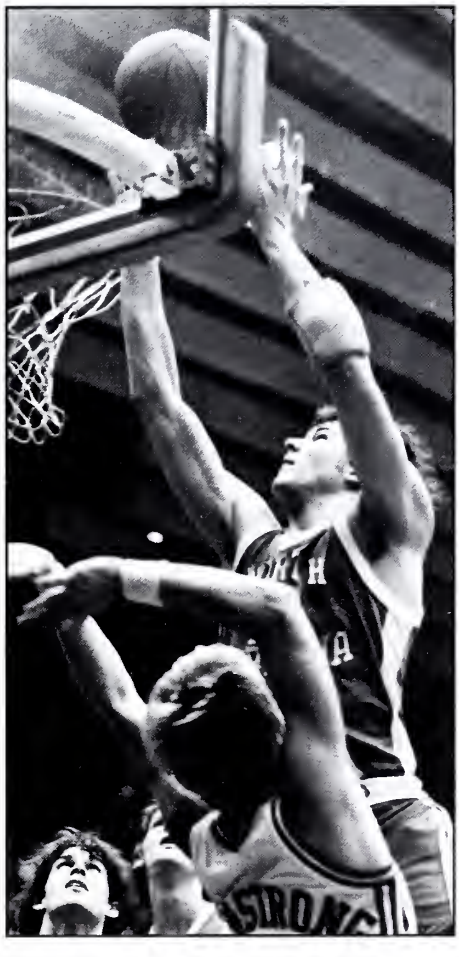
And, of course, there was Phil Ford. He was National Player of the Year as a senior and is the all-time Carolina leader in both points and assists. He has been called the greatest guard ever to play the college game. Phil also won NBA Rookie of the Year honors.

One of the best defensive players at Carolina, or anywhere else for that matter, was Dudley Bradley. A first-round pro draft choice, Bradley was the MVP in the 1979 ACC Tournament.

The next big stars were a trio of dynamic forwards — Mike O'Koren, Al Wood and James Worthy. O'Koren was the sixth player chosen in the 1980 NBA draft after putting together a brilliant Carolina career. He and Miller are the only two Carolina players to rank among the school's top 10 in scoring, rebounding and assists.

Wood capped a sensational four years by leading the Tar Heels to the 1981 NCAA championship game. He set an NCAA record with 39 points against Virginia in the national semi-finals. Always a great shooter, Wood developed into a complete player at Carolina. He was the first senior selected in the NBA draft following his final year.

Worthy was named Co-National Player of the Year with Ralph Sampson by First Interstate Bank (Helms) in 1982. He led the Tar Heels to a 32-2 record and the NCAA championship. Worthy saved perhaps the greatest performances of his career for the stretch drive that year, being named MVP in the ACC Tournament, the Eastern Regionals and the Final Four. He had a career-high 28 points against Georgetown in the NCAA Finals and was the first player selected in the 1982 NBA draft.



Mitch Kupchak

Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins

Another key player on that 1982 team was Jimmy Black. As the senior point guard, Black quarterbacked the Tar Heels through one of the school's greatest seasons ever. Only Ford has ever handed out more assists in a Tar Heel uniform.

Other starters were Matt Doherty, Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan. Doherty was the perfect role player on that team. Whatever needed to be done, he was capable of doing it — whether that meant a big defensive play, an important basket or a perfectly executed pass. He and Davis are the only players in ACC history with 1,000 career points, 400 rebounds and 400 assists.

Perkins finished his career as Carolina's second-leading all-time scorer and the top rebounder in school history. A brilliant defensive player, Sam was one of the biggest stars on the U.S. Olympic Team last summer in Los Angeles. But, that was to be expected. Perkins always seemed to be at his best in the biggest games when the opponents had names like Sampson, Tisdale, Olajuwon and Ewing.

Jordan was the unanimous National Player of the Year last season after being named the country's top player in 1983 by The Sporting News. A 6-6 guard, Jordan was capable of dominating a game both offensively and defensively. It was his jump shot with 17 seconds to play which gave the Tar Heels the winning points in the 1982 NCAA Finals. He followed that up with more heroics during the past two seasons and then was the leading scorer on the U.S. Olympic Team in Los Angeles.

Now, you can see why it is impossible to select one player as Carolina's greatest ever. It is much easier to look for the brightest star in the sky than one in Carolina Blue.

The University

A magnificent campus has done much to earn for The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill the title "Southern Part of Heaven," but the University's renown for natural beauty has been more than equalled by its reputation as one of the world's foremost academic institutions.

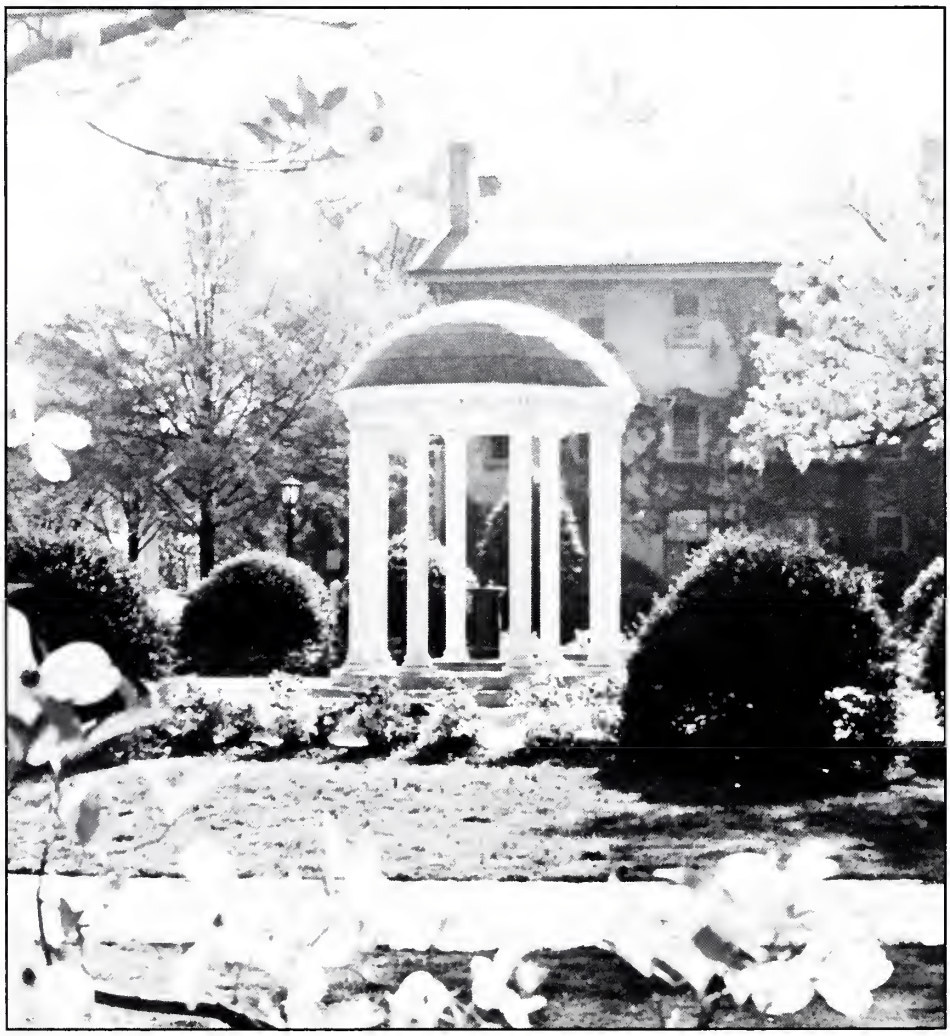
The New York Times Selective Guide to Colleges recently stated that, "UNC looks like a college campus with football-size quads and tree-lined walks," and praised the University for its academic excellence, awarding the University its highest rating for academics. Many other reports agree.

In a comprehensive evaluation recently published by the National Academy Press, Carolina was ranked as one of the foremost graduate and research institutions in the nation. The faculty was rated as the outstanding faculty in the Southeastern United States and one of the outstanding facilities in the country.

The University's faculty outranked all others in the region in the humanities, mathematics and the physical sciences, and the social and behavorial sciences, all of which encompass the major departments and disciplines and that teach both graduate and undergraduate students.

In the same year, the University's library was ranked first in the Southeast and among the top university research libraries in the United States.

Part of the genius of The University of North Carolina is that the people of the state have made these outstanding academic resources available to the youth of the state at not more than modest cost. Since the Constitution of the state in 1776 called for "one or more public universities," there has been a major commitment by the people of North Carolina to provide quality higher education available to the youth of the state at modest cost. In very few states can the most promising students truly reach for the stars at their own state-owned university, representing the best society has to offer.



The Old Well

In addition, the scope, range and variety of the University's programs and opportunities are stunning. The University's programs in business administration, education, journalism, law, physical therapy, library science and recreation administration have recently received high national rankings, as have the Schools of Medicine, Dentistry and Nursing.

The University faculty's research and scholarship capabilities attract large sums of money each year in research and training grants and contracts. The University is thus a major economic benefit for the state, annually bringing to the state more than $60 million in research and training grants and contracts, and consistently ranking in the top 30 in the nation among institutions receiving federal money for these purposes.

There are numerous areas of society's critical frontiers of knowledge where the University is providing research to move those frontiers forward and to provide the new knowledge that will enable our society to be both competitive and fulfilling. These areas of research range from the humanities and the fine arts to the natural, physical and social sciences.

The number of books and publications annually produced by members of the faculty is virtually uncountable, but it is well known that the University produced two more Pulitzer Prize winners this past year: one by the UNC Press (Matthew Hodgson, Director) and the other to Kenan Professor Emeritus Vermont C. Royster, School of Journalism.

The students of the University are thoroughly impressive. Almost 90% of the freshmen each year rank very near the top of their high school classes. They find the freedom and responsibility of being a student at Carolina to be both exhilarating and maturing, and surely from their ranks will come the next generation of North Carolina's and the nation's leaders.

Living alumni now number approximately 150,000 and are located in all 50 states and many foreign countries. Among them are national and statewide leaders in almost every field of endeavor.

In an effort to help assure continued excellence of future students and alumni, and to assist in one of its more critical problems, the University has taken a leadership role in working with public schools. Among the more than a score of innovative programs underway are three projects that join the forces of the School of Education and college of Arts and Sciences.

The imaginative Lyndhurst program provides a new approach to teacher-training through graduate support for talented baccalaureate graduates who wish to teach math, science and English.

In another program, math and science teachers within driving range of Chapel Hill have been coming to campus for several years to enhance their teaching skills. Both the University faculty and the school teachers are benefitting from this experience because of the mutual interchange and common interests that they share.

Beginning in 1984, high school teachers of English and foreign language will be spending a year in residence at Chapel Hill, updating their skills and teaching prospective teachers.

While many of the nation's research universities have abandoned teacher training at a time of society's critical need, this University has advanced it, and its faculty has demonstrated collaborative capacities that are inspirational.

The University serves the people of the state in many ways besides educating the youth of today and the leaders of tomorrow and conducting a multiplicity of research programs. Through its many outreach programs, business and government leaders are given an opportunity to participate in management programs. Physicians, dentists, lawyers and other professionals as well as state and local government officials are given the opportunity to participate in teaching and learning programs, and the Extension Division provides the public an opportunity to study and learn at home with a wide spectrum of offerings in both credit and noncredit courses.

These efforts and many others help to begin to describe the University at Chapel Hill, which Chancellor Fordham has characterized as having "integrity, excellence, high performance, a commitment to public service and public well-being, and to a strong, progressive voice in the affairs of society."

Educational Foundation

One of the most important organizations in the Carolina Athletic Department is the University's Educational Foundation.

It is the Educational Foundation which makes possible all athletic scholarships awarded by Carolina.

As the Tar Heels' sports program has grown through the years, the Foundation has done likewise. It currently has over 7,000 members who finance a scholarship program that costs $1,600,000 a year.

"Since its inauguration in 1938, the Foundation has provided scholarships, either partial or full, for over 3,000 student-athletes," says Ernie Williamson, the Foundation's executive vice-president.

Williamson feels the overall bonus of being a Foundation member is helping a worthy young student obtain a college education. He says the high caliber young athlete who is awarded a scholarship is a great representative of the University.

Any donation to the Foundation is welcome. However, membership in the Rams Club is restricted to those who contribute $150 or more.

Carolina was one of the first schools in the nation to set up an endowment program for athletics. This program was started in 1968 and has already surpassed the $7,000,000 mark.

The endowment program consists of $50,000 endowed scholarships, life memberships of $15,000 and $30,000, wills and bequests and a new dimension — a pooled income fund. Under the pooled income plan, a member gives a principal sum to the Foundation and then receives the interest off that during the remainder of his life.

A special room on the south wing of Kenan Fieldhouse serves as a meeting place for Rams and their families. This area is open two hours before football games and provides a lounge and picnic area for those who come early.

The Foundation operates on a dignified and realistic plane in compliance with all of the regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Other members of the Foundation staff are Moyer Smith, John Cherry and Neal Harrell. Along with Williamson, Mary Baggett, Wendy Mann, Terri Bare, and Jean Gunter, they have made the Foundation better able to serve its members.

"We couldn't have the type program we do without the Educational Foundation," says Athletic Director John Swofford. "We've enlarged our staff in the last two years and I think the staff additions we have made will enable us to do a better job for our members."

Ernie Williamson

The man who stands at the helm of the Educational Foundation is popular Ernie Williamson, the executive vice-president.

The former star Carolina tackle is one of the most active individuals on the Tar Heel sports scene. He is constantly on the go — talking with Foundation members, speaking to prospective members or avidly following all of Carolina's athletic teams.

Williamson is a Carolina graduate with A.B. and M.A. degrees. The native of Crewe, Va. played one season of football here under Carl Snavely and was regarded as an outstanding tackle. He was lured away to professional football and played with New York and Washington before a knee injury ended his career.

Williamson returned to Chapel Hill to finish work on his degrees and then went to the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn. He was an assistant coach there for two years and head coach for three seasons.

He returned to Carolina in 1957 to accept his present position. At one time he also served as a recruiter for the football program.

Williamson is highly respected in his field. He has served three terms as president of the National Association of Athletic Fund-Raisers.

Ernie is married to the former Elva Smith of Lawrencevilla, Va. They have a son, Wayne, and a daughter, Carole.
